large housing estates of the post war era have shaped the face of many cities throughout europe in the original plans of the 1950s 1980s they were to amend the urban structure and in many cases they were expected to enable a superior form of communality and urbanity the estates were built to ease the housing shortage but were also thought to quite literally become the home for a new society be it under socialist regimes or the democratic welfare state the reformation of society was expected to be supported by the environment of the newly built estates and most crucially their community spaces the different manifestations of these community spaces were the subject of the second conference of the 45plus network which took place in darmstadt in september 2012 and which is documented in this volume by focusing on community spaces such as community centers schools churches hospitals shopping districts but also parks open spaces and sport grounds the contributions to the conference addressed spaces that were thought to be particularly important points of identification for the new societies these estates were expected to foster community spaces were planned in order to hold the housing estates together as well designed and attractive
