a singular development of the post cold war era is the use of military force to protect human beings from rwanda to kosovo sierra leone to east timor soldiers have rescued civilians in some of the world s most notorious war zones drawing on two decades of research thomas g weiss provides a compelling introduction to the theory and practice of humanitarian intervention in the modern world he examines political ethical legal strategic economic and operational dimensions and uses a wide range of cases to highlight key debates and controversies this succinct and highly accessible survey is neither celebratory nor complacent the author locates the normative evolution of what is increasingly known as the responsibility to protect in the context of the war on terror and the 2005 un world summit the result is an engaging exploration of the current dilemmas and future challenges for international humanitarian action in the 21st century

international law makes it explicit that states shall not intervene militarily or otherwise in the affairs of other states it is a central principle of the charter of the united nations but international law also provides an exception when a conflict within a state poses a threat to international peace military intervention by the un may be warranted indeed the un charter provides for an international police force though nothing has ever come of this provision the charter and other un documents also assert that human rights are to be protected but in the past the responsibility for the protection of human rights has for the most part been allowed to rest on the government of the state where the violation of rights occurs not surprisingly in this context the question of what protection if any should be provided by the un or otherwise to individuals when their human rights are violated by their governments or with the complicity of their governments remains a contentious issue should the principle of respect for state sovereignty trump the principle of respect for human rights historically it has been allowed to do so but recently it has been more and more widely argued that when states fail to respect the human rights of their citizens or of others who reside within their boundaries they may be held accountable for their actions is military humanitarian intervention justifiable and if so under what circumstances those are the questions addressed in this collection of essays the focus of the volume is on the abstract principles involved though reference is sometimes made to specific cases the essays here consist primarily of philosophical reflection on the abstract issues a companion volume on the specific issues surrounding a particular case lessons of kosovo is being published simultaneously should states use military force for humanitarian purposes what are the challenges to international society posed by humanitarian intervention in a post september 11th world this path breaking work brings together well known scholars of law philosophy and international relations together with practitioners who have been actively engaged in intervention during the past decade together this team provides practical and theoretical answers to one of the most burning issues of our day case studies include somalia rwanda the balkans and east timor as well as the recent us intervention in afghanistan the book demonstrates why humanitarian intervention continues to be a controversial issue not only for the united nations but also for western states and humanitarian organizations

a singular development of the post cold war era is the use of military force to protect human beings from rwanda to kosovo sierra leone to east timor soldiers have rescued civilians in some of the world s most notorious war zones drawing on two decades of research thomas g weiss provides a compelling introduction to the theory and practice of humanitarian intervention in the modern world he examines political ethical legal strategic economic and operational dimensions and uses a wide range of cases to highlight key debates and controversies this succinct and highly accessible survey is neither celebratory nor complacent the author locates the normative evolution of what is increasingly known as the responsibility to protect in the context of the war on terror and the 2005 un world summit the result is an engaging exploration of the current dilemmas and future challenges for international humanitarian action in the 21st century provided by publisher focusing on case studies such as the international fight against the slave trade 1807 1890 the military interventions of the major european powers on humanitarian emergency aid for christian minorities in the ottoman empire 1827 1878 and the intervention of the united states in the cuban war of independence 1898 the book investigates the emergence of the military practice and related legal debates on the protection of humanitarian norms by violent means the central result of the book is that the idea of humanitarian intervention established itself as a recognized instrument in international politics during this period in this respect the international fight against the slave trade became the primal type of this new practice and played a key role in the emergence of a new understanding of humanitarian interventionism as a result guidelines under international law were developed which served as justification for military intervention in various crisis regions of the world thus the long 19th century can be indeed described as the genuine century of humanitarian intervention in which military interventionism under the banner of humanity was significantly intertwined with colonial and imperial projects international intervention on humanitarian grounds has been a contentious issue for decades first it pits the principle of state sovereignty against claims of universal human rights second the motivations of intervening states may be open to question when avowals of moral action are arguably the fig leaf covering an assertion of power for political advantage these questions have been salient in the context of the balkan and african wars and u s policy in the middle east this volume undertakes a serious systematic and broadly international review of the issues since the end of the cold war humanitarian interventions have continued to evolve and respond to a wide range of political crises these insightful essays focus on the challenges associated with interventions when facing conflict and human rights violations unmitigated systematic violence state re building human mobility and dislocation each chapter is linked to the rest through three defining themes that permeate the book the evolution of humanitarian interventions in a global era the limits of sovereignty and the ethics of interventions and the politics of post intervention re building and humanitarian engagement the authors incorporate a variety of case studies including kosovo timor leste syria libya and iraq and examine the complexity of interventions across their different dimensions including relevant doctrines such as r2p use of force and human security since the nato military intervention in kosovo in 1999 the issue of whether and when it is acceptable for states to intervene forcefully to halt human rights violations in another state has become one of the most contentious subjects in managing contemporary international relations with chapters on china india japan south korea and member states of the association of southeast asian nations asean by scholars from those countries this book presents a comparative analysis of asian views on humanitarian intervention these views reflect five interrelated factors shared to varying degrees by asian countries historical experience status as developing countries status as small or weak states problems with the west and the concept of the asian way contributors to this volume analyze these factors in an attempt to identify areas of consensus and divergence with a view to setting forth practical policy recommendations contributors include jia qinghua school of international studies peking university jasjit singh institute of defense studies and analysis india murata koji department of politics doshisha university japan kim sung han institute of foreign affairs and national security ministry of foreign affairs and trade korea rizal sukma centre for strategic and international studies indonesia and simon s c tay singapore institute of international affairs this volume offers an analysis of the activities of the international community in the balkans since the 1995 dayton agreement there has been substantial investment in the region but so far the gains have been limited and doubts remain as to the extent that sustainable security has been enhanced there is a need for serious reassessment of policies and priorities but this depends on a careful analysis of past successes and failures the contributors seek to provide this by examining intervention not just in terms of military action and the activities of major international agencies at state level but also the activities of outside ngos within the local environment this study addresses the acutely relevant international politics topics of humanitarianism and military interventionism in the post cold war global world it considers the present climate of global media and communications the increasing international awareness of humanitarian emergencies and the human rights agenda and the increasingly complex national and strategic interests of the interventionists the study is particularly concerned with interventionism in africa providing a detailed account and analysis of the troubled experience of somalia to draw wider conclusions for the continent issues of state sovereignty and international law the roles of civil society of individual countries regional organisations such as the african union and the broader united nations system it also covers the experiences of military interventions in iraq in 1991 kosovo and east timor and outlines some general policy recommendations and guidelines for humanitarian interventions essay from the year 2011 in the subject communications media and politics politic communications grade 1 1 language english abstract in looking at the reasons behind detrimental effects of humanitarian aid i attempt to explore the following question how does the media affect the success of humanitarian aid intervention efforts in large scale political violence i hypothesize that high levels of media coverage of such situations will lead to decreased effectiveness of humanitarian intervention much important information is lost and extraneous information is added throughout the life and travels of a news story this in turn leads to faulty public opinion and thus unsound demands and views on humanitarian action depending on the influence of actors self interest s this negative relationship may be magnified however my hypothetical relationship does not depend on such political interests the cases i have chosen to test this hypothesis are kosovo and tajikistan i chose these cases for multiple reasons first they are both internal violent conflicts since both of these conflicts occurred in areas close to developed countries in western europe these cases should be relatively equal in terms of opportunities for foreign interest in intervention both instances of violence in kosovo and tajikistan involve political conflict in which foreign humanitarian intervention was implemented all cases illustrated high levels of civil violence between different political and ethnic groups with at least 15 000 deaths interventions all took place during the 1990s so media communications can be evaluated from a similar technological standpoint the first interventions in kosovo took place in 1999 and tajikistan in 1992

international intervention on humanitarian grounds has been a contentious issue for decades this volume undertakes a systematic and broadly international review of issues relating to this subject in the past arbitration direct bargaining the use of intermediaries and deference to international institutions were relatively successful tools for managing interstate conflict in the face of terrorism intrastate wars and the multitude of other threats in the post cold war era however the conflict resolution tool kit must include preventive diplomacy humanitarian intervention regional task sharing and truth commissions here jacob bercovitch and richard jackson two internationally recognized experts systematically examine each one of these conflict resolution tools and describe how it works and in what conflict situations it is most likely to be effective conflict resolution in the twenty first century is not only an essential introduction for students and scholars it is a must have guide for the men and women entrusted with creating stability and security in our changing world cover illustration istockphoto com

when can a state give political support to a military intervention in another state the government of the netherlands commissioned an international expert group composed of eminent members from the fields of international law international relations and diplomacy the expert group s objective was to examine this complex topical and time sensitive question and to consider whether the government should press for international acceptance of humanitarian intervention as a new legal basis for the use of force between states in exceptional circumstances this volume is the result of those efforts the expert group was led by professor cyrille fijjnaut and consisted of mr kristian fischer professor terry gill professor larissa van den herik professor martti koskenniemi professor claus kreß mr robert serry ms monika sie dhian ho ms elizabeth wilmshurst and professor rob de wijk their thorough analysis and recommendations offer important insights that can aid governments in formulating a position on political support for the use of force between states and humanitarian intervention the volume also constitutes a useful tool for scholars and practitioners in considering these difficult and important issues from the foreword by stef blok minister of foreign affairs of the netherlands the expert group s thorough analysis and recommendations on this complex subject offer important insights that can aid the government in formulating its position on political support for the use of force between states and humanitarian intervention in drawing up this advisory report the expert group has helped the government develop a new contemporary vision on these issues
