why reading literature in school still matters imagination interpretation insight explains how a reader s involvement with literary texts can create conditions for developing deep insight into human experience and how teachers can develop these interpretive possibilities in school contexts developed from the author s many years of research this book offers both a theoretical framework that draws from an interdisciplinary array of sources and many compelling and insightful examples of literary engagement of child adolescent and adult readers as well as practical advice for teachers and other readers about how to create interesting and expansive sites for interpretation that are personally rewarding and productive why reading literature in school still matters imagination interpretation insight provides an overview of theories of human learning that influence beliefs about language culture and identity shows how these theories of learning influence beliefs about and practices of reading and interpretation introduces new ways to conceptualize reading that emphasize the relationship between individual and collective identities and language literacy practices explains why access to information does not guarantee that understanding and or insight will occur by emphasizing the importance of re reading and close reading this text shows that development of deep insight depends on interpretation skills that must be taught and presents a reconceptualized view of reading pedagogy this is an essential text for education courses at both the undergraduate and graduate levels and a must read for teachers and for anyone interested in more deeply understanding how literary works of art can create conditions for learning about oneself one's situation and one's possibilities literary studies still lack an extensive comparative analysis of different kinds of literature including ancient and non western how literary worlds are shaped a comparative poetics of literary imagination aims to provide such a study literature it claims is based on individual and shared human imagination which creates literary worlds that blend the real and the fantastic mimesis and genre often modulated by different kinds of unreliability the main building blocks of literary worlds are their oral visual and written modes and three themes challenge perception and relation they are blended and inflected in different ways by combinations of narratives and figures indirection thwarted aspirations meta usages hypothetical action as well as hierarchies and blends of genres and text types moreover literary worlds are not only constructed by humans but also shape their lives and reinforce their sense of wonder finally ten reasons are given in order to show how this comparative view can be of use in literary studies in sum how literary worlds are shaped is the first study to present a wide ranging and detailed comparative account of the makings of literary worlds

a college student wants to lead a campaign to ban a young adult novel from his child's elementary school as his service learning project in a children's literature course believing the book is offensive to religious sensibilities he sees his campaign as a service to children and the community viewing such a ban as limiting freedom of speech and access to information the student's professor questions whether leading a ban qualifies as a service project if the goal of service is to promote more vital democratic communities what should the student do what should the professor do how do they untangle competing democratic values how do they make a decision about action this book addresses the teaching dilemmas such as the above that instructors and students encounter in service learning courses recognizing that teaching in general and service learning in particular are inherently political this book faces up to the resulting predicaments that inevitably arise in the classroom by framing them as a vital and productive part of the process of teaching and learning for political engagement this book offers the reader new ways to think about and address seemingly intractable ideological issues faculty encounter many challenges when teaching service learning courses these may arise from students resistance to the idea of serving their lack of responsibility wasting clients and community agencies time and money the misalignment of community partner expectations with academic goals or faculty uncertainty about when to guide students experiences and when direct intervention is necessary in over twenty chapters of case studies faculty scholars from disciplines as varied as computer science engineering english history and sociology take readers on their and their students intellectual journeys sharing their messy unpredictable and often inspiring accounts of democratic tensions and trials inherent in teaching service learning using real incidents and describing the resources and classroom activities they employ they explore the democratic intersections of various political beliefs along with race ethnicity class gender ability sexual orientation and other lived differences and likenesses that students and faculty experience in their service learning classroom and extended community they share their struggles of how to communicate and interact across the divide of viewpoints and experiences within an egalitarian and inclusive environment all the while managing interpersonal tensions and conflicts among diverse people in complex value laden situations the experienced contributors to this book offer pedagogical strategies for constructing service learning courses and non prescriptive approaches to dilemmas for which there can be no definitive solutions
