this volume explores the different ways that ethnic and religious diversity is conceptualized and debated in south and east asia in the first few decades following decolonization talk of multiculturalism and pluralism was discouraged as states attempted to consolidate themselves as unitary and homogenizing nation states today however it is widely recognized that states in the region must come to terms with the enduring reality of ethnic and religious cleavages and find new ways of accommodating and respecting diversity as a result many countries are now debating policies to accommodate minorities including recognition of indigenous rights minority language rights consociational power sharing regional autonomy and multination federalism this is often described as a key ingredient in any process of democratization in the region one manifestation of this new ethos is the growing rhetoric of multiculturalism often imported from the west and indeed western models of minority rights have had an influence in many asian countries often promoted by international organizations however asian societies also have their own traditions of peaceful coexistence amongst linguistic and religious groups all of the major ethical and religious traditions in the region from confucian and buddhist to islamic and hindu have their own conceptions of tolerance and their own recipes for sustaining unity amidst diversity these traditions continue to shape people s beliefs and practices in the region even the distinctive conception of marxism developed in the region provides an influential perspective on these issues not found in the west the rhetoric of multiculturalism may be ubiquitous around the world but it is being used to express quite different ideas and norms using both case studies and thematic essays this volume examines the pre colonial traditions colonial legacies and post colonial ideologies that influence contemporary debates on multiculturalism in the region it explores the areas of convergence and divergence between these different perspectives and the extent to which they provide viable frameworks for managing ethnic and religious diversity in the region seminar paper from the year 2009 in the subject politics political systems germany grade 10 bilgi university İstanbul bilgi university İstanbul institute for european studies course politics of ethnocultural diversity language english abstract germany's discourse about multiculturalism is marked by its contrariness on the one hand there are many attempts to implement the theory of multiculturalism in political practice the slogan of berlin's integration concept in 2007 vielfalt fördern zusammenhalt stärken supporting diversity strengthening cohesion aimed at the advertisement of the positive potential of the city's pluralist landscape on the other hand the media often issues headlines and statements of politicians who declare multiculturalism in germany as unsuccessful the mayor heinz buschhowsky of neukölln a district in berlin inhabited by about 30 percent migrants with his rigorous conclusion multiculturalism has failed in 2005 caught the attention of the media in these contradicting positions the constant efforts to politically apply multicultural theory and then again the questioning whether multiculturalism is generally applicable in germany originates the interest to gain an extensive insight into multiculturalism practiced in germany this paper aims to combine the political theory and practice of multiculturalism therefore it inquires how the theoretical concept of multiculturalism is put into practice in a german context as an efficient means to manage immigration after the definition of the term multiculturalism this essay will further concentrate on german examples due to my own interest and the reason that in my opinion case studies better illustrate the theory i chose to concentrate on the german cities frankfurt main and berlin to demonstrate how multiculturalism was implemented there within this framework the paper inquires to answer the questions of how german multiculturalism developed and what its characteristics are due to the earlier pointed out inconsistencies in the debate about multiculturalism the last part of the paper elaborates and names the main criticisms against the term especially manifest in the case studies the fourteen essays in this volume address the pros and cons of multiculturalism and explore its relationship with liberal democracy
