following a series of economic and political changes in the late 1980s art design schools and performing arts academies were incorporated into the university system to justify their teachings as academic research they developed the idea of practice led research practice led research recognizes two or more languages that is the validity of both explicit propositional knowledge and embodied tacit knowledge allowing for the researcher's corresponding output expressed through both the written word and relevant practice. Christians often find themselves living a life of two languages: a set of intellectual beliefs and the practice of being a Christian. This book develops this methodology and translates it for use in theological research. Most importantly, it clearly develops key elements of this methodology using a comprehensive model and detailed definitions. This is a book which not only presents a fully articulated and flexible model of practice-led research but also presents Christian researchers with an approach they could incorporate into their theological work.

The Modern Republican Party in Florida chronicles the emergence of the modern Republican Party in Florida. It provides the historic political foundation for the modern political era in Florida. It identifies the key elements of Republican Party organizations and structures that became the foundation for the current Republican network and it contrasts the current political environment to the one-party era of the Democratic Party. The book identifies the officeholders, volunteers, and party officials who contributed to and became part of the Republican network. It also discusses the ever-changing elements of the Florida political arena which includes voters with no party affiliation, soft money committees, and independent campaign consultants.

Examining some of the huge challenges that liberal states faced in the decade after 11 September 2001, the chapters in this book address three aspects of the impact of more than a decade of military action. This book begins by considering four different expressions of universalist moral aspirations including the prohibition of torture and discusses migration and responsibility to protect as well as the United Nations Human Rights Committee's concluding observations about security and liberty in the last decade. International humanitarian law and the problems posed by the territorial character of war and the effects of new technologies and child soldiers are also analysed. Finally, Islamic law and its interface with international law is considered from a new perspective, and contributions in this final part offer a different way of thinking about an authentically Islamic modernisation that would be compatible with western models of political order. With contributions from international lawyers from diverse backgrounds, this book fills an important gap in the literature on the themes of international human rights law, international humanitarian law, and Islamic law.
