in artifactual elizabeth anne davis explores how cypriot researchers scientists activists and artists process and reckon with civil and state violence that led to the enduring division of the island using forensic and documentary materials to retell and recontextualize conflicts between and within the greek cypriot and turkish cypriot communities davis follows forensic archaeologists and anthropologists who attempt to locate identify and return to relatives the remains of cypriots killed in those conflicts she turns to filmmakers who use archival photographs and footage to come to terms with political violence and its legacies in both forensic science and documentary filmmaking the dynamics of secrecy and revelation shape how material remains such as bones and archival images are given meaning throughout davis demonstrates how cypriots navigate the tension between an ethics of knowledge which valorizes truth as a prerequisite for recovery and reconciliation and the politics of knowledge which renders evidence as irremediably partial and perpetually falsifiable in 1959 what appeared to be the bones of a mastodon were found in a western new york pasture when researchers began to investigate further in the early 1980s the site proved to hold far more known as the hiscock site it contained an astonishingly rich trove of fossils and artifacts dating from the late ice age through the onset of european settlement for nearly three decades work at the site the byron dig unearthed new evidence of changing fauna flora cultures and environments over the past 13 000 years in two acres of time richard s laub the principal investigator of the project tells the story of the byron dig recounting twenty nine years of intensive excavation involving more than a thousand participants he provides a comprehensive account of a working paleontological and archaeological field project and its contributions to our knowledge of the past laub explores how understanding of the site evolved through the years the surprises that came to light along the way and how contributions from numerous researchers helped achieve a fuller picture of the significance of the findings the book also shows how people from all walks of life not only scientists but also volunteers and local small town residents worked together to unearth and interpret the site s contents and to preserve them for future generations this extensively illustrated book connects life at a scientific excavation project to the grand sweep of long ago epochs and is a compelling read and resource for researchers and general readers alike
