this volume examines contemporary african american poets from the well known writers of the late 20th century to the newly established and emerging voices of today

what i say innovative poetry by black writers in america is the second book in a landmark two volume anthology that explodes narrow definitions of african american poetry by examining experimental poems often excluded from previous scholarship the first volume every goodbye ain't gone covers the period from the end of world war ii to the mid 1970s in what i say editors aldonna lynn nielsen and lauri ramey have assembled a comprehensive and dynamic collection that brings this pivotal work up to the present day the elder poets in this collection such as nathaniel mackey c s giscombe will alexander and ron allen came of age during and were powerfully influenced by the black arts movement and what i say grounds the collection in its black modernist roots in tracing the fascinating and unexpected paths of experimentation these poets explored however nielsen and ramey reveal the tight delineations of african american poetry that omitted noncanonical forms this invigorating panoply of work when restored brings into focus the creatively elastic frontiers and multifaceted expressions of contemporary black poetry several of the poets discussed in what i say forged relationships with members of the language poetry movement and participated in the broader community of innovative poetry that emerged in the late 1970s and early 1980s and continues to exert a powerful influence today each volume can stand on its own and reading them in tandem will provide a clear vision of how innovative african american poetries have evolved across the twentieth century and into the twenty first what i say is infinitely teachable compelling and rewarding it will appeal to a broad readership of poets poetics teachers poetics scholars students of african american literature in nonnarrative forms afro futurism and what lies between the modern and the contemporary in global and localized writing practices the feminist avant garde in american poetry offers a historical and theoretical account of avant garde women poets in america from the 1910s through the 1990s and asserts an alternative tradition to the predominantly male dominated avant garde movements elisabeth frost argues that this alternative lineage distinguishes itself by its feminism and its ambivalence toward existing avant garde projects she also thoroughly explores feminist avant garde poets debts and contributions to their male counterparts in trauma in 20th century multicultural american poetry jamie d barker argues that by using literary trauma theory in conjunction with a reader response approach readers can gain a better understanding of how poetry can work towards building community and encouraging empowerment over oppression by establishing collectives of people who may share similar stories and experiences connected to trauma rather than demonstrating how the poetry may fail or trying to establish what traumatic events the speaker or poet in some studies may have encountered and the significance thereof this study focuses on how the reader may find community with the ideas represented within the poem the poetry of various ethnicities are examined including african american poets amiri baraka and lucille clifton native american poets robin coffee linda hogan and peter blue cloud as well as japanese american poets mitsuye yamada keiho soga and lawson fusao inada although many of these poets have had their poems examined in the past none have been explored through this type of approach furthermore very few studies have expanded upon the ideas of literary trauma theory by using reader response and no writings have examined the idea of ambivalence in poetry as this study does
