it has been almost fifty years since theological educators first began talking about contextual theology today in every country of the global south their home schools require them to contextualize theological education and construct contextual theologies that would be helpful for their local churches in spite of this expectation there are few helps available the expectation is clear but an understanding of the process by which this may occur is lacking educators often complain that they are led to adapt western theology to their context rather than developing theology for their churches arguments for contextual theology are proposed often but there has been little debate explaining and defending the methods involved this book is intended to enter that debate and invite others who should help appreciate the gravity of our situation and join the conversation the epicenter of christianity has shifted to the global south yet contextual theology which seeks to preserve the integrity of the faith has not been met with generosity among scholars in the us and europe this book intends to forge helpful bridges that encourage mutual regard to develop among scholars across the globe the bubble of the western academy needs to be breached the idea that covenant theology is profoundly influential in john wesley s theological thought sounds dissonant what would an evangelical arminian have to do with a theological framework that historically belongs to a reformed understanding of salvation how could this possibly square with his ongoing controversy with the calvinism of his day on the basis of compelling evidence from his sermons and correspondence this investigation dares to push through the impulse to dismiss the idea that covenant theology belongs to the infrastructure of wesley s thought the resulting discovery of its role in shaping his narrative of the way of salvation is surprising and intriguing wesley is not only informed and fluent with respect to covenant theology but thoroughly committed to it this study demonstrates that with theological precision and discernment wesley appropriates covenant theology in a way that is consistent both with its primary theological features and with his arminianism his distinctive view of the gradual process of the work of god in the soul supplies valuable grist for further reflection especially by those charged with the care of souls in the twenty first century since the 1980s renewal scholars have given considerable attention to the role of the believing community in the interpretive process a broad consensus has emerged that a triad involving scripture the spirit and the believing community forms a cooperative relationship resulting in theological development followed by commensurate action identified in this research as theological creativity in the context of this research to be creative with theology is to take an existing theological assumption and broaden or adapt it to current circumstances given the spirit s evidential work and a consensual understanding of scripture but how does the community negotiate between spirit and scripture without subsuming either into its own predilections for luke the first century community of believers in acts functions as an indispensable character in the formation of theological creativity this work will demonstrate how luke positions the community as a character in story form between spirit and scripture functioning as a bridge through which its testimony of the spirit s evidential work and its application of scripture interact in order to illustrate this balancing act we will use a modified configuration of the triadic notion spirit community scripture
