seminar paper from the year 2001 in the subject business economics business management corporate governance grade 8 maastricht university course comparative management language english abstract lobalization is one of words used nowadays to describe the convergence of cultures cultures are believed to move closer together as a result of increased travel better communication methods and enhanced transportation opportunities hassan 1991 companies try to anticipate this change by offering standardized products to a global audience examples of global products are credit cards mobile phones automobiles food and beverages the big mac for example is a standardized products market globally that it is used by economists to measure the purchase power of different currencies the famous big mac index marketers face many challenges in this global village but one of the most interesting challenge is how far can standardization of marketing efforts be pursued cultural differences are a logical barrier to standardization of the marketing strategies on a global scale as there are countless cultures on this planet there are also many different needs that must be satisfied by adapted marketing mixes therefore standardization ignores the cultural differences for the sake of simplicity and cost savings the knowledge of cultures and the understanding of cultures is important to develop effective marketing strategies across cultures simplifying cultures is done via segmentation segmentation helps clustering groups of people that might respond in the same manner to pecially adapted marketing strategies segmentation plays a vital role in the process of standardizing marketing efforts it helps standardizing customer groups how far can companies go in standardizing their marketing efforts this topic is discussed by many authors as mentioned later in this article and represent a dilemma global companies face either they simplify their marketing strategies to save costs but ignore cultural differences or they adapt their marketing strategies to local needs and incur rather high costs and high efforts the main problem this article investigates is how can the concept of culture be used to resolve the dilemma faced by global companies in standardizing or adapting their marketing efforts
