prayer is intercourse with god as unconstrained as that of children with their father in which we speak with him of what concerns his glory his good pleasure and the interests of our soul such is the idea of prayer given us by jesus christ our lord in answer to the apostle s request that he should teach them to pray thus shall you pray our father who art in heaven this answer shows that in meditation we are holding converse not only with the creator and sovereign lord of all things but still more as respectful loving and beloved children with their father our lord adds hallowed by thy name thy kingdom come thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven by these words he shows that the subject of the conversation should be god s glory and his good pleasure before all else he concludes with these words give us this day our daily bread and forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those who trespass against us and lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil from which it is evident that the second subject of this conversation are our own interests that is our eternal happiness and the means of attaining it in conformity with the teaching of our divine lord st gregory of nyssa says that prayer is a communing and conversation with god and st chrysostom that it is a colloquy with god from the preface

there is a process used for printing pictures in colour which involves the making of separate blocks for each elementary component colour in the picture the prints from each of these blocks are superimposed on each other and if the relative strength of each colour is correct the result is quite natural if however anyone shade is too weak then there is a corresponding defect in final rendering of the true colour which might perhaps be corrected by an extra printing of the weak component now the purpose of these pages is something like that of the extra printing it is not that the standard presentation of mental prayer is defective but it would seem that the impression of mental prayer that many souls have received needs to be strengthened in certain colours that purpose explains the irregular extent of treatment which the reader will notice in these pages the subject of methodical meditation is only outlined as there are more than enough excellent books dealing with it in great detail besides the souls for whom this book is primarily intended are those who cannot succeed with the usual methods of meditation as well as those who once were able to meditate but now find that it has become an impossibility to do so in order to fit this extra printing into the general picture of prayer the whole subject is at least outlined certain phases which seem to need more detailed treatment being dealt with more extensively but there is another reason why we have insisted on including a discussion of such states of prayer as those which we have called the prayer of faith and why we beg the reader whatever may be his position on the ladder of prayer to read the whole work whatever may be said about the general law of the development of prayer when observed and averaged among a large number of different souls most individuals find that their path of advance is extremely twisted and shows rapid and extensive variations it would seem therefore that except perhaps at the very beginning an acquaintance with the nature and technique of all the different stages of prayer is not only helpful at any stage but even necessary at all of them despite the title of this work it is not a scientific analysis or a classified catalogue of the various difficulties that may arise in prayer with a complete practical solution of each one appended in its proper place its purpose is rather to discuss the nature and ways of prayer not with scientific objectivity but from the point of view of the individual looking at it as it appears to him in this way it is hoped to put the soul in position to deal with most of his own difficulties further the primary purpose is not so much to instruct the reader as to encourage him to press on in prayer and to induce him to seek further information from the works of more competent pens that is why the treatment of the subject is so condensed so much so that it will need a second reading to extract all we have tried to say this re reading is all the more advisable from the fact that the earlier chapters will be more easily understood in light of those which follow as the point is so well treated in many other works it is assumed that the reader is aware of the necessity of mental prayer a christian who does not pray is like a man who neither thinks nor wills a mere animal in the spiritual life the pursuit of perfection is utterly impossible without mental prayer which of course may be made quite unconsciously in fact it may be said that if a man does not pray he cannot save his soul
