this book offers a bold and controversial new thesis regarding the nature of prejudice the authors central claim is that prejudice is not simply learned rather it is predisposed in all human beings and is thus the foundation for ethical valuation they aim to destroy the illusion that prejudice is merely the result of learned beliefs socially conditioned attitudes or pathological states of development contrary to traditional accounts prejudice itself is not a negative attribute of human nature rather it is the necessary precondition for the self and civilization to emerge defined as the preferential self expression of valuation prejudice gives rise to greater existential complexities and novelties that elevate selfhood and society to higher states of ethical realization rather than offer another contribution that highlights the destructive nature of prejudice mills and polanowski address the ontological psychological and dialectical origins of prejudice as it manifests itself in the process of selfhood and culture they provide an original conceptualization of the phenomenology of prejudice and its dialectical instantiation in the ontology of the individual worldhood and the very structures of subjectivity as a unique synthesis of psychoanalysis hegelian idealism heideggerian existential ontology and whiteheadian process philosophy prejudice is the indispensable ground for humanity to actualize its highest potentiality for being the striking result is 1 a revolutionary theory of human nature 2 a new ethical system and 3 the elevation of dialectical ethics to the domain of metaphysics with his 1954 book the nature of prejudice american psychologist gordon allport displays the crucial skill of reasoning producing and organizing an argument that was persuasive enough to have a major impact not only in universities but also on government policy the question that allport tackled was an old one why are people so disposed to prejudice against those from other groups earlier psychologists had suggested a number of reasons especially in the case of racial prejudice some had suggested that racism was a learned behaviour conditioned by negative experiences of other races others that there was an objective rationale to negative racial stereotypes allport however reasoned that prejudice is essentially a by product of the necessary mental shortcuts the human brain uses to process the vast amount of information it takes in because our brains want to use as little effort as possible they regularly fall back on simple stereotypes which easily generate prejudice gathering strong evidence for this hypothesis he reasoned clearly and persuasively that our natural cognitive approach is the most significant factor in accounting for prejudice going further still allport also reasoned that once this was better understood social scientists would be able to influence policy makers to curb discrimination by law
