southeast asia treaty organization pledging to defend several nations in the region from communist aggression one of those nations was south vietnam before the vietnam war most americans would have been hard pressed to locate vietnam on a map south vietnamese president diem s regime was extremely unpopular and war broke out between communist north vietnam and south vietnam around the end of the 1950s kennedy s administration tried to prop up the south vietnamese with training and assistance but the south vietnamese military was feeble a month before his death kennedy signed a presidential directive withdrawing 1 000 american personnel and shortly after kennedy s assassination new president lyndon b johnson reversed course instead opting to expand american assistance to south vietnam over the next few years the american military commitment to south vietnam grew dramatically and the war effort became both deeper and more complex the strategy included parallel efforts to strengthen the economic and political foundations of the south vietnamese regime to root out the viet cong guerrilla insurgency in the south combat the more conventional north vietnamese army nva near the demilitarized zone between north and south and bomb military and industrial targets in north vietnam itself in public american military officials and members of the johnson administration stressed their tactical successes and offered rosy predictions speaking before the national press club in november 1967 general westmoreland claimed i have never been more encouraged in the four years that i have been in vietnam we are making real progress i am absolutely certain that whereas in 1965 the enemy was winning today he is certainly losing ripe for the plucking by north vietnam the country of south vietnam found itself in an unenviable position in 1974 american forces rapidly withdrew leaving only a few advisers and other personnel in place of the large forces deployed in the southeast asian theater until recently president gerald ford and his staff completely outmatched at the negotiations during the american retreat parleyed from a position of weakness the north vietnamese gave essentially no useful concessions since they had no reason to and they secured an american withdrawal without needing to remove their own advance units from south vietnamese territory in return naturally these facts reflected themselves in the morale of the two sides south vietnamese morale collapsed to catastrophic levels and remained there though the arvn army of the republic of vietnam forces occasionally managed gallant even heroic stands the north vietnamese by contrast felt confident of victory from the highest to the lowest ranks a mix of marxist zeal and barely expressed but very real nationalism strengthened the resolve of the north vietnamese s commanders and soldiers as well a haunting fear remained among the north vietnamese that the americans would return but each fresh success with no american response made this concern recede further into the background as 1975 dawned the nva prepared for a final series of campaigns to conquer the territory of south vietnam leading to a chain of events that culminated with the fall of saigon and some of the most infamous footage in 20th century america s history the fall of saigon the history of the battle for south vietnam s capital and the end of the vietnam war examines how the war ended
