some of the world's earliest large form fictional narratives what would today be called novels are found in ancient greece dating back to the first century ce these narratives contain many of the elements common to the novelistic genre for instance the joining separation and reunion of two lovers these ancient works have often been heralded as the ancestors of the modern novel but what can we say of the origins of the greek novel itself this book argues that whereas much of greek literature was committed to a form of cultural purism presenting itself as part of a continuous tradition reaching back to the founding fathers within the tradition the novel reveled in cultural hybridity the earliest greek novelistic literature combined greek and non greek traditions more than this however it also often self consciously explored its own hybridity by focusing on stories of cultural hybridization or what we would now call mixed race relations this book is thus not a conventional account of the origins of the greek novel it is not an attempt to pinpoint the moment of invention and to trace its subsequent development in a straight line rather it makes a virtue of the murkiness or dirtiness of the origins of the novel there is no single point of creation no pure tradition only transgression and transformation the novel thus emerges as an outlier within the greek literary corpus a form of literature written in greek but not always committing to greek cultural identity dirty love focuses particularly on the relationship between persian egyptian jewish and greek literature and explores such texts as ctesias persica joseph and aseneth the alexander romance and the tale of ninus and semiramis it will appeal not only to those interested in greek literary history but also to readers of near eastern and biblical literature often translated as a nest of gentlefolk home of the gentry liza or noble nest Лиза in russian home of the gentry was written between 1856 and 1858 it tells the story of fyodor lavretsky a nobleman who returns disillusioned to his family estate after his wife the charming but unfaithful varvara betrays him back in russia lavretsky falls in love with liza kalitina a pure hearted young woman from a neighboring family their tender romance however is thwarted when lavretsky s estranged wife varvara suddenly arrives apparently seeking reconciliation and bringing their child in the end liza morally conflicted enters a convent and lavretsky is left alone with his regrets home of the gentry russian Лиза poignantly explores themes of love honor and missed chances amid the declining nobility and it remains one of turgenev s most lyrical and elegiac novels beyond its simple narrative home of the gentry can be seen as an exploration of turgenev s personal struggle with his identity as a Russian expatriate like Lavretsky Turgenev spent much of his life abroad often torn between his admiration for Western Europe and his deep attachment to his homeland. The novel's detailed exploration of Lavretsky's sense of loss and disillusionment mirrors Turgenev's own feelings of alienation from Russia especially as the country underwent rapid political and social change. Home of the Gentry is a subtle criticism of Russian society especially the aristocracy. The novel portrays a Gentry class nostalgic for the past but impotent in the face of modern realities. Lavretsky's emotional crisis is emblematic of the broader crisis of the Russian nobility who like him are caught between tradition and the inevitable march of progress. Through his portrayal of Lavretsky and Liza Turgenev explores the emotional consequences of a society out of step with the changing world around it offering a poignant reflection on the limits of personal and social transformation in mid-nineteenth century Russia. This critical reader's edition presents a modern translation of the original manuscript crafted to help the reader engage directly with Turgenev's works through clean contemporary language and simplified sentence structures that clarify his complex ideas. Supplementary material enriches the text with autobiographical historical and linguistic context including an afterword on Turgenev's history impact and intellectual legacy highlighting the personal relationships that shaped his philosophy focusing on Dostoevsky Tolstoy and Gogol an index of the philosophical concepts he employs emphasizing realism and nihilism a comprehensive chronological list of his published writings a brief biography and a detailed timeline of his life.

Friendship and Love in the Middle English Metrical Romances groups together a representative cross section of the genre according to variants of love relationships and to ideas of friendship. The horizontal and the vertical structure of the relationship are tripartite: the horizontal stages are attraction separation testing trial and reunion; the vertical spheres are the personal social political and religious. All relationships fall into two types: the restorative concordant and the innovative discordant. These are defined by the relative position of the partners in the social political sphere of their relationship. The groups of relationship are defined by the initially more active partner forward heroine fairy mistress forward hero mutual love married love friendship lords and retainers. Surveys of the insular understanding of courtly love and of Caxton's prose romances complement the findings.
