the heart has its reasons explores a hitherto neglected area of theological anthropology the unity of human emotion and reason embodied in the biblical concept of the heart while the theological contours of human rationality have long been clearly drawn and presented as the exclusive seat of the image of god affectivity has been relegated to a secondary position with the reintegration of the body into recent philosophical and theological discourses a number of questions have arisen if the image also resides in the body how does this change one s view of the theological significance of human affect in what way is our likeness to god realised in the whole of what we are can one overcome the traditional dissociation between intellect and affect by a renewed theory of love in conversation with patristic and medieval authors like irenaeus tertullian gregory of nyssa maximus and thomas aquinas and in dialogue with more recent interlocutors such as blaise pascal ricoeur marion milbank and john paul ii beata toth pursues a novel theological vision of the essential unity of our humanity theological anthropology at the beginning of the third millennium is the third volume of the theology at the beginning of the third millennium series bringing together catholic and orthodox scholars of diverse disciplines this work sheds new light on the question what does it mean to be a human person beginning with an overview on the state of the discipline in our time the book brings theological anthropology into dialogue with epistemology christology science spiritual theology and pedagogy it explores how human persons who are created in god s image and likeness can come to knowledge of the self and the other such that the individual person can know love and be united to the god and father of jesus christ
