urbanization has had a major impact on livelihoods in ghana and throughout africa as a whole however much research on urbanization has focused on effects occurring within cities while there is insufficient understanding of its effects on rural areas this paper examines the impact of urbanization through a typology of districts on rural livelihoods in ghana the country s districts are classified into seven spatial groups according to the size of the largest city in each district in southern and northern ghana the paper does not address rural urban migration but instead focuses on the livelihoods of rural households in contrast to the extensive literature focusing on the effects of urbanization on individuals we assess its impacts on individual rural households as a whole with a particular focus on youth headed households many rural households have shifted their primary employment from agriculture to nonagriculture especially in the more urbanized south in contrast change in livelihood diversification within rural households with family members primary employment in both agriculture and nonagriculture appears much less rapid rural youth headed households are significantly more associated with the transition away from agriculture than households headed by other adults and such trends are stronger in locations closer to larger cities particularly in the south although the nonagricultural economy is becoming increasingly important for rural households contrary to expectations the probit model analysis in this paper shows that agricultural production does not appear to be more intensified in terms of modern input use in the more urbanized south and youth do not show greater agricultural technology adoption than other adults indicating that the constraints against modern input adoption may be binding for all farmers including youth and farmers in more urbanized locations we also find that rural poverty rates are consistently lower among nonagricultural households and the share of middle class population is also disproportionally higher among rural nonagricultural households than agricultural households while the probit analysis confirms the positive relationship between being a nonagricultural household and being nonpoor or becoming middle class after controlling for all other factors education seems to play the biggest role as rural youth become more educated and more households shift from agriculture to the rural nonfarm economy a different range of technologies for agricultural intensification is necessary for agriculture to be attractive for youth a territorial approach and related policies that integrate secondary cities and small towns with the rural economy deserve more attention such that the diversification of rural livelihoods can become a viable alternative or complement to rural urban migration for youth in time and death carol white articulates a vision of martin heidegger s work which grows out of a new understanding of what he was trying to address in his discussion of death acknowledging that the discussion of this issue in heidegger s major work being and time is often far from clear white presents a new interpretation of heidegger which short circuits many of the traditional criticisms white claims that we are all in a better position to understand heidegger's insights after fifty years because they have now become a part of the conventional wisdom of common opinion his view shows up in accounts of knowledge in the physical sciences in the assumptions of the social sciences in art and film even in popular culture in general but does so in ways ignorant of their origins now that these insights have filtered down into the culture at large we can make heidegger intelligible in a way that perhaps he himself could not white presents the best possible case for heidegger making him more intelligible to those people with a long acquaintance with his work those with a long aversion to it and in particular to those just starting to pursue an interest in it white places the problems with which heidegger is dealing in the context of issues in contemporary anglo american philosophy in order to better locate him for the more mainstream audience the language and approach of the book is able to accommodate the novice but also offers much food for thought for the heidegger scholar by d m armstrong in the history of the discussion of the problem of universals g f stout has an honoured and special place for the nominalist meaning by that term a philosopher who holds that existence of repeatables kinds sorts type and the indubitable existence of general terms is a problem the nominalist's opponent the realist escapes the nominalist's difficulty by postulating universals he then faces difficulties of his own is he to place these universals in a special realm or is he to bring them down to earth perhaps turning them into repeatable properties of particulars universalia in res and repeatable relations between universals universalia inter res whichever solution he opts for there are well known difficulties about how particulars stand to these universals under these circumstances the nominalist may make an important concession to the realist a concession which he can make without abandoning his nominalism he may concede that metaphysics ought to recognize that particulars have properties qualities perhaps and are related by relations but he can maintain these properties and relations are particulars not universals nor indeed is such a position entirely closed to the realist a realist about
