state formation and the emergence of civilization have been two of the major arenas of debate in aegean prehistory for the last twenty five years the process of urbanization has therefore been at the forefront of scholarly debate bronze age towns however have largely been ignored particularly at a generalized level research has usually focused on their architecture and particularly their elite or public architecture rather than their general nature and character and many studies have been restricted to a single town or even a single building this volume redresses the balance and draws attention and thought not only to urban settlements as a whole but to their social and economic roles their demographic significance and ultimately to their character and personality are we to believe that late minoan crete was over run with dancers and bull leapers as senta german shows dancing and bull leaping were the most prevalent themes of late bronze age glyptic art although aside from their demonstration of a social and perhaps symbolic activity they also had a much deeper function in late minoan society rhyta are among the most appealing yet enigmatic classes of artefacts from the aegean bronze age they were produced in a wide range of forms and media with a consistently high degree of craftsmanship this comprehensive study of bronze age rhyta from the aegean builds on nearly a century of discoveries and scholarly contributions and addresses questions of typology function context and the uses of these vessels the volume includes a thoroughly illustrated catalogue an index of sites and the present locations of rhyta the greek bronze age roughly 3000 to 1000 bce witnessed the flourishing of the minoan and mycenaean civilizations the earliest expansion of trade in the aegeon and wider mediterranean sea the development of artistic techniques in a variety of media and the evolution of early greek religious practices and mythology the period also witnessed a violent conflict in asia minor between warring peoples in the region a conflict commonly believed to be the historical basis for homer s trojan war the oxford handbook of the bronze age aegeon provides a detailed survey of these fascinating aspects of the period and many others in sixty six newly commissioned articles divided into four sections the handbook begins with background and definitions which contains articles establishing the discipline in its historical geographical and chronological settings and in its relation to other disciplines the second section chronology and geography contains articles examining the bronze age aegean by chronological period early bronze age middle bronze age late bronze age each of the periods are further subdivided geographically so that individual articles are concerned with mainland greece during the early bronze age crete during the early bronze age the cycladic islands during the early bronze age and the same for the middle bronze age followed by the late bronze age the third section thematic and specific topics includes articles examining thematic topics that cannot be done justice in a strictly chronological geographical treatment including religion state and society trade warfare pottery writing and burial customs as well as specific events such as the eruption of santorini and the trojan war the fourth section specific sites and areas contains articles examining the most important regions and sites in the bronze age aegean including mycenae tiryns pylos knossos kommos rhodes the northern aegean and the uluburun shipwreck as well as adjacent areas such as the levant egypt and the western mediterranean containing new work by an international team of experts the oxford handbook of the bronze age aegean represents the most comprehensive authoritative and up to date single volume survey of the field it will be indispensable for scholars and advanced students alike offers an innovative theory for ancient art and its creativity demonstrated through the rich material and visual culture of the protohistoric aegean 38 papers on aegean bronze age pottery in honour of jeremy rutter they range from specific site reports to technical reports and issues of chronology to analysis of the social and religious functions of particular vessel types and studies of trade and cultural contacts the years c 1250 to 1150 bc in greece and the aegean are often characterised as a time of crisis and collapse a critical period in the long history of the region and its people and culture they witnessed the end of the mycenaean kingdoms with their palaces and linear b records and through the postpalatial period the transition into the early iron age but on closer examination it has become increasingly clear that the period as a whole across the region defies simple characterisation there was success and splendour resilience and continuity and novelty and innovation actively driven by the people of these lands through this transformative century the story of the aegean at this time has frequently been incorporated into narratives focused on the wider eastern mediterranean and most infamously the sea peoples of the egyptian texts in twenty five chapters written by 25 specialists collapse and transformation instead offers a tight focus on the aegean itself providing an up to date picture of the archaeology before and after the collapse of c 1200 bc it will be essential reading for students and scholars of the aegean and eastern mediterranean regions as well as providing data and a range of interpretations to those studying collapse and resilience more widely and engaging in comparative studies introductory chapters discuss notions of collapse and provide overviews of the minoan and mycenaean collapses these are followed by twelve chapters which review the evidence from the major regions of the aegean including the argolid messenia and boeotia crete and the aegean islands six chapters then address key themes the economy funerary practices the mycenaean pottery of the mainland and the wider aegean and eastern mediterranean region religion and the extent to which later greek myth can be drawn upon as evidence or taken to reflect any historical reality the final four chapters provide a wider context for the aegean story surveying the eastern

Mediterranean including Cyprus and the Levant and the themes of subsistence and warfare

The art and archaeology of the Aegean Bronze Age offers a comprehensive chronological and geographical overview of one of the most important civilizations in human history. Jean-Claude Poursat's volume provides a clear path through the rich and varied art and archaeology of Aegean prehistory from the Neolithic period down to the end of the Bronze Age, charting the regional differences within the Aegean world. His study covers the full range of material evidence including architecture, pottery, frescoes, metalwork, stone, and ivory, all lucidly arranged by chapter with nearly 300 illustrations. This volume is one of the most lavishly illustrated treatments of the subject yet published. Suggestions for further reading provide an up-to-date entry point to the full richness of the subject. Originally published in French and translated by the author's collaborator Carl Knappett, this edition makes Poursat's deep knowledge of the Aegean Bronze Age available to an English language audience for the first time.

The papers published here are dedicated to the memory of Ellen N. Davis, one of the most valued and beloved Aegean scholars of her generation. All of the articles are in some way inspired or influenced by Davis's own contributions to the field in the area of metalwork. Several papers investigate interconnections within and around the Aegean during the early, middle, and late Bronze Ages. Betancourt, Ferrence, and Muhly; Weingarten and Kopcke, while others examine metal ware in its social context. Wiener's papers on wall painting range from studies of pigments and optical illusions to Vlachopoulos's representations of water. Shank's anthropomorphic representations or their absence of goddesses or priestesses; Jones's rulers; Palaima or Initiates; Koehl are also studied here with new eyes and fresh insights.
