In May 1993 the United Nations Security Council founded the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) based in The Hague, Netherlands. The ICTY was formed with the objective of prosecuting those who had committed war crimes, crimes against humanity and genocide in Bosnia and Herzegovina and elsewhere in the former Yugoslavia during the early to mid 90s. During its mandate 1993-2017 the tribunal heard many cases and tried numerous perpetrators from those who carried out the killings to those who orchestrated and ordered them. In spite of its accomplishments the ICTY is considered to be highly controversial. It is debated if the ICTY did enough to foster healing and reconciliation in many of the conflict-torn societies. Many scholars argue that the tribunal operated adequately within their mandate and sought to promote justice and reconciliation. However, those who lived through the brutal wars would argue that there has simply been no justice. Importantly, Bosnia and Herzegovina still remains a country divided by issues of post-conflict justice among other things. In 2010 a government-led strategic plan emerged that was intended to deal with the unfinished business of justice and promote reconciliation throughout the country. However, it failed to do this and there is currently no political will or momentum to revive it. But was this strategy doomed to failure from the beginning? In the form of a quantitative study, this book examines the possibility of reconciliation being achieved in Bosnia and Herzegovina through the methods fostered by the strategy focusing on three major cities: Sarajevo, Mostar, and Banja Luka. Dr. Jared Bell surveyed nearly 500 people in order to shed light on the subject of the national transitional justice strategy and reconciliation from the perspective of the everyday populace.

On 1 January 2006 soldiers from across Bosnia and Herzegovina gathered to mark the official formation of a unified army. And yet, little over a decade before these men had been each other's adversaries during the vicious conflict which left the Balkan state divided and impoverished. Building a multi-ethnic military in post-Yugoslav Bosnia and Herzegovina offers the first analysis of the armed forces during times of peace building in Bosnia and Herzegovina. This sophisticated study assesses Yugoslav efforts to build a multi-ethnic military during the socialist period, charts the developments of the armies that fought in the war, and offers a detailed account of the post-war international initiatives that led to the creation of the armed forces of Bosnia and Herzegovina. At this point, the military became the largest multi-ethnic institution in the country and was regarded as a model for the rest of Bosnian society to follow. As such, Elliot Short adroitly contends this multi-ethnic army became the most significant act in stabilising the country since the end of the Bosnian war. Drawing upon a wealth of primary sources including interviews with leading diplomats and archival documents made available in English for the first time, this book explores the social and political role of the Bosnian military and in doing so provides fresh insight into the Yugoslav wars.

when yugoslavia disintegrated in the early 1990s competence in english was not widespread this book explores how english came to be equated with economic survival for many during and after the ensuing war through a range of diverse social and professional contexts from the classroom to the military to the international criminal court while english provided social mobility for many its abrupt arrival also contributed to the marginalization of those without the adequate language skills the high level of international intervention in bosnia and herzegovina over the last two decades has contributed to a sense of normalization of the presence of english viewed as a far more complex issue than simple linguistic imposition this book explores the widespread adoption of english and its effects on a nation recovering from war the war in bosnia and herzegovina was characterized by human rights abuses on a scale not seen in europe since the second world war it is not then surprising that the dayton agreement together with related texts and agreements lays out the most ambitious human rights protection regime ever included within an international peace settlement the peace agreement imports myriad substantive guarantees for the protection of every category of human rights including some through a novel application of the european convention on human rights the provisions are accompanied by a highly complex system for both monitoring and enforcement of their implementation these enforcement procedures contain temporary elements such as international field operations and an array of tribunals and institutions intended to be permanent the present volume is a contribution to the process of interpreting and assessing the post dayton human rights regime in bosnia and herzegovina the analysis of the contributing human rights scholars and practitioners is located within the contexts of the immediate reality and needs of bosnia and herzegovina and the systemic significance of the peace agreement for other post conflict and complex emergency situations worldwide
