reading dante s commedia alongside jacques derrida s later religious writings francis j ambrosio explores what these works reveal about religion as a fundamental dynamic of human existence about freedom and responsibility and about the significance of writing itself ambrosio argues that both the many telling differences between them and the powerful bonds that unite them across centuries show that dante and derrida share an identity as religious writers that arises from the human experiences of faith hope and love in response to the divine mystery of being human for both dante and derrida ambrosio contends scriptural religion reveals that the paradoxical tension of freedom and absolute responsibility must lead to the mystery of forgiveness a secret that these two share and faithfully keep by surrendering to its necessity to die so as always to begin again anew

do you fear death our last breath on earth is followed immediately by our first breath in eternity and for many the distance between those breaths is full of fear and uncertainty through the use of personal stories and insightful conversations monica hannan has opened for us a light into an often dark subject her natural gift for storytelling and her in depth interviews with those who have experienced death either their own or the deaths of those close to them offer proof not only that our lives do not end here but that there is no need to fear our final hours or what comes next for those who put their trust in god death truly is a gift as we close our eyes in this world and open them in the next as i made my way through the manuscript it reminded me of so many experiences in my own life and ministry which is a signal to me that the book will be a true service to its readers msgr james p shea president
