the formative tendency i have often pointed out that in my work with individuals in therapy and in my experience in encounter groups i have been led to the conviction that human nature is essentially constructive when in a therapeutic climate which can be objectively defined a person becomes sharply aware of more of his or her internal experiencing and of the stimuli and demands from the external world thus acquiring a full range of options the person tends to move in the direction of becoming a socially constructive organism but many are critical of this point of view why should such a positive direction be observed only in humans isn't this just pure optimism so quite hesitantly because i have to draw on the work and thinking of others rather than on my own experience i should like to try to set this directional tendency in a much broader context i shall draw on my general reading in the field of science but i should like to mention a special indebtedness to the work of lancelot whyte in the universe of experience harper and row 1974 the last book he wrote before his death though the book has flaws in my judgment this historian has some thought provoking themes to advance i have learned from many others as well in a tough opening statement m brewster smith outlines his own life course and contrasts it with the agenda of social psychology in the present professional moment today's journals textbooks and conferences represent a vigorous but narrow scientific specialty in psychology the practitioners of which are more closely focused on agendas that are primarily and often only intelligible within the subdiscipline than was the case when i formed my identity as a psychologist in contrast smith sees himself and has long been seen by others as a social psychologist in the tradition of gordon allport gardner and lois murphy kurt lewin and muzafer sherif smith's unique ability has been to contribute to the emergence of personality as a differentiated academic field and at the same time maintain strong interdisciplinary ties to a variety of fields ranging from sociology to philosophy in recent years such concerns have made the author a central figure in the development of humanistic psychology as a part of the american psychological association because of these wide ranging concerns the major statements of brewster smith have appeared in diverse places here brought into a unified and uniform frame of reference one has his work on values and selfhood humanistic psychology and the social sciences and humanism and social issues brought together for the first time the picture is of a major thinker who is at home in the details of psychology and in the broad areas of public interest and social policy brewster smith discusses major issues in terms of the political processes involved in the public interest these range from the issue of advocacy within social research to conceptualizing anew familiar issues within psychology for the generalist interested in the broader meanings of social psychology to the specialist aiming to recapture the big issues with which the field was once identified this is a must volume
