a current overview of what is meant by cultural complexity and how archaeologists study the development of complex societies in north america according to archaeologist stephen h. lekson, much of what we think we know about the southwest has been compressed into conventions and classifications and orthodoxies. this book challenges and reconfigures these accepted notions by telling two parallel stories: one about the development, personalities, and institutions of southwestern archaeology, and the other about interpretations of what actually happened in the ancient past. while many works would have us believe that nothing much ever happened in the ancient southwest, this book argues that the region experienced rises and falls, kings and commoners, war and peace, triumphs and failures. in this view, chaco canyon was a geopolitical reaction to the colonial period; hohokam expansion and the hohokam classic period was the product of refugee chacoan nobles chased off the colorado plateau by angry farmers far to the south; casas grandes was a failed attempt to create a mesoamerican state; and modern pueblo people with societies so different from those at chaco and casas grandes deliberately rejected these monumental hierarchical episodes of their past. from the publisher: the second printing of a history of the ancient southwest has corrected the errors noted below. sar press regrets an error on page 72, paragraph 4. also page 275, note 2 regarding absolute dates: 50,000 dates was incorrectly published as half a million dates. also p. 125, lines 13-14: between 21,000 and 27,000 people lived there should read between 2,100 and 2,700 people lived there.

based on archaeological investigations along state route 85, this fourth installment in the gila river indian community anthropological research papers provides a close look at the subtle interface between the archaeological cultures of the western hohokam and eastern patayan, including chapters on geomorphology, ceramics, lithics, shell, pollen, and ethnobotanical remains. an abundance of well-preserved trails and historical roads, including the anza and butterfield trails, also provides the foundation for historical overviews and incisive theoretical discussion. this unique collaboration between asu's office of cultural resource management and the gila river indian community's cultural resource management program also provides an unusual account of depression-era african american homesteading at the warner goode ranch. based on oral history, archival research, and archaeological data, historic transportation corridors, homesteads, and prehistoric occupations on trails traversing cultural and geographic transitions make this a coherent and engaging view of this centuries-old crossroads and a valuable reference for the archaeology and history of the gila bend.

archaeologists have come to recognize that prehistoric burial practices provide an unparalleled opportunity for understanding and reconstructing ancient civilizations and for identifying the influences that helped shape them. editors douglas mitchell and judy brunson hadley have gathered unprecedented scholarship on burial practices and sites in the american southwest, offering a wide variety of approaches, techniques, and analyses by leading archaeologists, physical and biological anthropologists, paleopathologists, and native american tribal historians and resource managers. twenty scholars evaluate ancient burial practices to recreate the structure and history of major southwestern cultures, including the hohokam, anasazi, sinagua, zuni, mogollon, and salado. this state-of-the-art collection combines case studies, population analyses, an examination of new federal laws that have changed the face of archaeological mortuary studies, and an essential native american perspective on archaeologists' study.

of human remains and mortuary artifacts

For all peoples on all continents and for all times, water has been the blood of life. It is fitting then that this book about the peoples of the Southwest be dedicated to an examination of water in a land that has historically been dry, making the need to locate water supplies essential. The Southwest became an important frontier for Spanish and then Anglo explorers and colonizers who battled with native occupants for strategic locations. Each one of these groups who made the Southwest their home were ethnically quite different; they represented diverse histories, cultures, nationalities, classes, religions, and world views. Beginning with a discussion of innovative prehistoric land and water use, the book describes the ways in which early farmers learned how to harness the precious drops of water for their fields. The story then continues with views from the pueblos and beyond as the living sacredness of earth's resource is described by native peoples. This emic view, however, is often in conflict with the various legal definitions of resources carved by federal, state, and local officials and developers. The book goes on to examine the background of contemporary land conflicts and water litigation between numerous contestants: Indian, Hispanic, and Anglo. The book ends with articles that attest to the clever ways in which ethnicity is configured and boldly proclaimed in order to reclaim privilege.

Contains 450 entries by 110 contributors organized by themes including issues, events, culture, government, people, and primary sources about American Indians.

An understanding of the history of the world and understanding why this knowledge is important has become essential for today's students benefiting from the unifying viewpoint of a single author. This lively two-volume narrative tells the story of human events on the move: the exciting event history of wars and politics, booms and busts, the rise and fall of empires, and more. It also reaches beyond the events that have shaped world history to trace the broader development of human institutions and ideas as they evolve through time. Special attention to art and ideas in each period and civilization.

Selection of papers presented at the Center for Archaeological Investigations 19th Annual Visiting Scholar Conference held at Southern Illinois University Carbondale, April 2002.
