starting in 1901 as a three mile long trolley line in east chicago indiana the chicago south shore and south bend railroad expanded in 1908 to connect south bend indiana with chicago illinois once a treasure in the sam insull utilities empire today it is the only functioning electric interurban in the united states from a world class city through rolling agricultural acres from steel mills through a national lakeshore some 200 vintage photographs illustrate the unique view of the calumet region that south shore passengers have traditionally enjoyed images of rolling stock passenger depots excursion destinations and historic sites along the way combine to reveal the century long story of the railroad and its 90 mile corridor an argument that individuals and collectives form memories by analogous processes and a case study of collective retrograde amnesia we form individual memories by a process known as consolidation the conversion of immediate and fleeting bits of information into a stable and accessible representation of facts and events these memories provide a version of the past that helps us navigate the present and is critical to individual identity in this book thomas anastasio kristen ann ehrenberger patrick watson and wenyi zhang propose that social groups form collective memories by analogous processes using facts and insights from neuroscience psychology anthropology and history they describe a single process of consolidation with analogous not merely comparable manifestations on any level whether brain family or society they propose a three in one model of memory consolidation composed of a buffer a relator and a generalizer all within the consolidating entity that can explain memory consolidation phenomena on individual and collective levels when consolidation is disrupted by traumatic injury to a brain structure known as the hippocampus memories in the process of being consolidated are lost in individuals this is known as retrograde amnesia the authors hypothesize a social hippocampus and argue that disruption at the collective level can result in collective retrograde amnesia they offer the chinese cultural revolution 1966 1976 as an example of trauma to the social hippocampus and present evidence for the loss of recent collective memory in mainland chinese populations that experienced the cultural revolution we have long been encouraged to look to education especially higher education for the solution to social problems particularly as a way out of poverty for the talented and the hard working but in its appointed role as the path to upward mobility that makes inequality more acceptable higher education is faltering these days as funds for public institutions are cut and tuition costs soar everywhere as for profit education races into the breach and as student debt grows wildly the comfortable future once promised to those willing to study hard has begun to fade from sight so now is a good time to take a more serious look at the ways class structures higher education and the ways teachers can bring it into focus in the classroom in recent decades scholarly work and pedagogical practice in higher education have paid increasing attention to issues of race class gender and sexuality but among these four terms of analysis and clearly they are interrelated class is often an afterthought and work that does examine class and higher education tends to focus only on admissions on who is in the college classroom not on what happens there class and the college classroom offers a broader look at the connections between college teaching and social class it collects and reprints twenty essays originally published in radical teacher a journal that has been a leader in the field of critical pedagogy since 1975 this wide ranging and insightful volume addresses the interests concerns and pedagogical needs of teachers committed to social justice and provides them with new tools for thinking and teaching about class
