in december 1981 soldiers of the salvadoran army s select american trained atlacatl battalion entered the village of el mozote where they murdered hundreds of men women and children often by decapitation although reports of the massacre and photographs of its victims appeared in the united states the reagan administration quickly dismissed them as propaganda in the end el mozote was forgotten the war in el salvador continued with american funding when mark danner s reconstruction of these events first appeared in the new yorker it sent shock waves through the news media and the american foreign policy establishment now danner has expanded his report into a brilliant book adding new material as well as the actual sources he has produced a masterpiece of scrupulous investigative journalism that is also a testament to the forgotten victims of a neglected theater of the cold war through fieldwork among the surprisingly numerous survivors the author reconstructs the recent social structure culture and history of the northeastern salvadoran village of segundo montes before during and after the infamous massacre she tries to place anthropology squarely into political issues but also focuses on the people's oral testimonies more than on her own ethnography especially resisting the easy total categorization of the survivors as victims handbook of latin american studies v 57

this book brings a fresh perspective on what may be the largest massacre in modern latin american history many new additions are included such as data from half a dozen field trips discussions of reconstruction and the fight for justice and the relation of the massacre to the region provided by publisher divided societies tormented pasts and unrepentant perpetrators why are some countries more intent on vanquishing uncomfortable pasts than others how do public and often unsightly attempts at memorialisation both fail the victims and valorize their oppressors this book offers fresh and original perspectives on dictatorship fascism and victimization from the bloodiest decades in europe's australia's and central america's colonial and modern history chapters include analyses of francoist memorials in spain assessments of the el mozote massacre in el salvador the forgetting of frontier colonial violence in tasmania romania's treatment of its roma populations in the midst of holocaust memorialisation in bucharest's urban development and whether or not the holocaust continues to serve as an instructional model or impossible aspiration for cross cultural genocide memorialisation strategies in an era of ongoing political ethnic and religious conflict and unrepentant insurgent activity around the world this collection reminds readers that genocidal actions wherever and whenever they occurred must be held to account by more than rhetoric and concrete memory this book was originally published as a special issue of the journal of genocide research specters of war analyzes how mourning has been expressed in postwar salvadoran and guatemalan fiction theatre and sites of memory from popular to insurgent intellectuals explains how a group of catholic lay catechists educated in liberation theology came to take up arms and participate on the side of the rebel FMLN during El Salvador's revolutionary war 1980-92. In the process they became transformed from popular intellectuals to insurgent intellectuals who put their organizational and cognitive skills at the service of a collective effort to create a more egalitarian and democratic society. The book highlights the key roles that peasant catechists in northern Morazán played in disseminating liberation theology before the war and supporting the FMLN during it as quartermasters, political activists and musicians among other roles throughout. From popular to insurgent intellectuals, highlights the dialectical nature of relations between Catholic priests and urban revolutionaries among others in which the latter learned from the former and vice versa. Peasant catechists proved capable at making independent decisions based on assessment of their needs and did not simply follow the dictates of those with superior authority and played an important role for the duration of the twelve year military conflict.
