originally published in 1987 this book comprises a critical exposition of the thoughts on metaphysics of the major philosophers of the tradition it introduces the ideas of these philosophers to students but is of interest to teachers as well the author begins with a survey of the metaphysical writings of plato aristotle berkeley leibniz and bradley clarifying throughout the relation of their methods and results to those of science he follows this with a careful study of the critical attitudes to metaphysics espoused by kant wittgenstein and the logical positivists in the final section he scrutinizes the attempts by collingwood wisdom and lazerowitz to rehabilitate metaphysics

this book is an essay in the speculative treatment of certain problems suggested but not usually discussed in the course of a thorough empirical study of mental phenomena inasmuch as these problems all relate to the real nature and actual performances and relations of the human mind the essay may properly be called metaphysical let it be confessed then that the author comes forward with a treatise in metaphysics in the more special meaning of that term i think however that in spite of the marked disfavor into which all metaphysics has fallen in certain quarters no detailed apology for asking readers for such a treatise need be offered in its preface indeed the first two chapters of the book are occupied in showing how inevitable is the demand which the science of psychology makes for a further philosophical discussion of all its principal problems if then this demand is not made perfectly clear by the more detailed discussion which follows it would be quite use less to put it forward unsupported at the beginning of my task in the hope of producing a favorable first impression upon reluctant intelligences no one whose peace of mind is sure to be disturbed by any attempt however carried out at this form of reflective thinking should venture beyond the title page and table of contents of this volume on the other hand however i wish to be held responsible for two things which are required in order to entitle to respect every treatise of a similar character these are first the statement of the facts and laws scientifically established to which the speculative discussion constantly refers for its own grounds in experience and for metaphysics which has no foundations in incontestable experience i have as little respect as has any one but besides this constant appeal to facts and to laws empirically established sound reasoning is indispensable for the derivation of acceptable conclusions in any metaphysical enterprise any reader or critic therefore who will point out violations of either of these two requirements will be entitled to grateful recognition for his service no less by the author than by the readers of this volume a few words concerning the relations which this book sustains to preceding works by the same author will be helpful for its better understanding in some sort the entire volume may be regarded as in continuation of a series of works i on psychology or the science of mental phenomena this science which as a science is and ever must remain chiefly descriptive starts many inquiries regarding the real nature and relations to the external world the book that lies in front of you is a philosophical treatise in great depth and with impeccable logic it considers the most important of human problems what is meaning in all aspects of the understanding of the word and how is it formed in the human mind from the chaos of the world what is consciousness which depicts the world and finds meaning in it
