almost everything that matters to humans is derived from and through communication just because people communicate every day however does not mean that they are communicating competently in fact evidence indicates that there is a substantial need for better interpersonal skills among a significant proportion of the populace furthermore dark side experiences in everyday life abound and features of modern society pose new challenges that make the concept of communication competence increasingly complex the handbook of communication competence brings together scholars from across the globe to examine these various facets of communication competence including its history its essential components and its applications in interpersonal group institutional and societal contexts the book provides a state of the art review for scholars and graduate students as well as practitioners in counseling developmental health care educational intercultural and human resource management contexts illustrating that communication competence is vital to health relationships and all collective human endeavors the handbooks of applied linguistics provide a state of the art description of established and emerging areas of applied linguistics each volume gives an overview of the field explains the most important traditions and their findings identifies the gaps in current research and gives perspectives for future directions this book integrates recent findings of linguistic research into elt its aim is to introduce future teachers to the complex concept of communicative competence to critically analyse learners teaching learning deficiencies in the light of the requirements they are expected to meet at the school leaving exams or at university entry to offer suggestions about how to remedy these shortcomings and also to provide teaching and testing materials in our everyday life communicative processes are relevant in almost all situations it is important to know whether you should say something which is adequate in the situation or whether it is better to say nothing at all communicative competence is fundamental for a successful life in our society as it is of great importance for all areas of life therefore it is not surprising that communicative competence is the subject of many theoretical and empirical approaches and in consequence research on this topic is diverse we focus our contributions on linguistic aspects of communication in the centre of interest are linguistic oriented performances of different forms of communicative competence language acquisition and language disorders the topics of this book concern the description of methods for studying language in the brain the interaction between language and cognition discourse acquisition of children literacy acquisition and its precursors the use and acquisition of the sign language models and training of writing and reading nonverbal communicative competence media competence communication training developmental dyslexia the treatment of stuttering and the description of language disorders the idea of interculturality being an essential part of a language learner s toolkit is widely accepted less certain is exactly what interculturality is and how to determine who has it who does not have it and importantly how to get it this book is concerned with these questions the work presented here explores the concept of intercultural communicative competence as an aim of foreign language learning it examines in particular the role of student mobility and how short stays abroad affect higher education students perceptions of their development of this complex competence it explores the coinage of the term intercultural communicative competence and the current debate regarding its definition usage and usefulness the work then moves on to describing an empirical study in which students who are studying english at a german university participate in an eight week short stay abroad to the english speaking world and are asked about their perceived development of intercultural communicative competence and the ways in which their expectations for the stay abroad are met developing intercultural communicative competence is an institutional aim of the stay abroad and therefore the ways the participants make sense of this competence are of interest through case study research and quantitative questionnaires data are gathered analysed and described the study shows that even a short stay abroad helps develop intercultural communicative competence albeit in individually different ways this book presents a concise critical overview of the literature on intercultural communicative competence icc and offers insights into research on this concept as a novel contribution to the field the book frames icc in relation to other learner variables such as motivation willingness to communicate communication apprehension and self perceived communication competence based on empirical data the study proposes and tests a model of english majors icc interacting with individual differences related to l2 communication the findings highlight that students beliefs about their own performance their apprehension from communication situations and their language learning motivation were successfully integrated into a new model of intercultural communicative competence as understood in an interactional efl context this book focuses on theoretical psychometric and practical issues which pose a challenge to the measurement of language proficiency the complexity and difficulty of defining communicative competence and identifying appropriate approaches for its measurement among students with limited english is reflected both by the contributors to the volume
