the classic conception of human transcendental consciousness assumes its self supporting existential status within the horizon of life world nature and earth yet this assumed absoluteness does not entail the nature of its powers neither their constitutive force this latter call for an existential source reaching beyond the generative life world network transcendental consciousness having lost its absolute status its point of reference it is the role of the logos to lay down the harmonious positioning in the cosmic sphere of the all establishing an original foundation of phenomenology in the primogenital ontopoiesis of life the notions of the cosmic city and the common law are central to early stoic political thought as vogt shows together they make up one complex theory a city is a place governed by the law yet on the law pervading the cosmos can be considered a true law and thus the cosmos is the only real city a city is also a dwelling place in the case of the cosmos the dwelling place of all human beings further a city demarcates who belongs together as fellow citizens the thought that we should view all other human beings as belonging to us constitutes the core of stoic cosmopolitanism all human beings are citizens of the cosmic city in the sense of living in the world but the demanding task of acquiring wisdom allows a person to become a citizen in the strict sense someone who lives according to the law as the gods do the sage is the only citizen relative friend and free person via these notions the stoics explore the political dimensions of the stoic idea of wisdom vogt argues against two widespread interpretations of the common law that it consists of rules and that lawful action is what right reason prescribes while she rejects the rules interpretation she argues that the prescriptive reason interpretation correctly captures key ideas of the stoics theory but misses the substantive side of their conception of the law the sage fully understands what is valuable for human beings and this makes her actions lawful the stoics emphasize the revisionary nature of their theory whatever course of action perfect deliberation commands even if it be cutting off one's limb and eating it we should act on its command and not be held back by conventional judgments
