a lyrical and insightful narrative that presents a new approach to the idea of pilgrimage traversing paths both ancient and modern retracing sacred travel made across time from murmurs of ritual journeys in the depths of ice age to new pilgrimages of the 21st century on this holy island is an epic adventure across sacred british landscapes we follow oliver smith as he climbs into remote sea caves sleeps inside neolithic tombs scales forgotten holy mountains and once even marrons himself at sea following holy roads to churches cathedrals and standing stones this evocative and enlightening travelogue explores places prehistoric pagan and christian smith also reveals how football stadiums and music festivals have become contemporary places of pilgrimage though the routes walked are often ancient the pilgrims he meets are always modern but underpinning the remarkable book is a timeless truth that making journeys has always been a way of making meaning so often smith finds the unravelling of a path goes in tandem with the unravelling of the soul this title was first published in 2003 the history of roads in great britain has not been one of steady development but rather one that has waxed and waned in response to social military and economic needs and also as to whether there have been alternative methods of transport available paralleling this the technical aspects of road construction with the one great exception of roman roads can be seen as a fitful progression of improvement followed by neglect as the roadmaker has responded albeit tardily on occasion to the needs of the road user this text describes the technical development of british roads in relation to the needs of the time and thereby touches upon its relation to the history of the country more generally this set of papers by european and north american archaeologists explore the interface between new spatial technologies and areas of theoretical concern in spatial archaeology differing aspects of landscape such as vision perception and movement are explored through a series of case studies that focus on how spatial technologies can influence archaeological interpretation and to what extent these new technologies can be manipulated to take us beyond 2 dimensional maps individual site based analyses and new applications of predictive modelling are also presented and assessed together with the wider questions of spatial technologies within heritage management
