in this period of increasing the economic sustainability among countries the need for optimizing the role of small and medium scale enterprise arises where they can foster the economic development small and medium sized enterprises smes has been recognized internationally as an instrument for empowering the citizenry and economic development this has been associated with the swift economic progression of countries in many countries across the globe this study examines the role of small and medium businesses in economic growth of kurdistan the paper identifies the process of establishing a significant relationship between small businesses and the economic sustainability in the kurdistan it covers the performance of sme in kurdistan compared to the developing and developed countries specifically this research tends to determine how profitable sme business is whether infrastructural improvement could be endorsed to the presence of smes in the kurdistan region it also investigates how small and medium scale enterprises contributed to the employment in the region in addition it tries to discover how the sme sector has captivated banks and financial institutions with an increase in loans and incentives it also determines the other potential input from the government side in reinforcing the smes in the region the study concludes by identifying the strategic context to recommend appropriate procedures through which smes can be more successfully developed in this research both primary and secondary data have been used to collect information i have used correlation and simple regression technique to determine the correlation among the variables and simple regression analysis to show how independent variable affects the dependent variable specifically i have used quantitative data that include statistics of the number of smes for ten sectors between 2011 up to 2013 with an average of 621 observations to further investigate about smes performance in the region i have also conduct close ended questionnaires the results of this research identified that there is a positive correlation between number of smes and gross domestic products gdp in kurdistan region over 2007 2014 therefore the higher the number of smes in the region the higher the gdp will be this study also identified the performance of smes and addressed the obstacles in the perspective of the owners the finding shows that majority of smes in the region do not depend on the technology it also indicated that access to finance is counted as the major challenge for smes development in the region nevertheless the information gathered gives an insight that the banking sector in kurdistan has a weak role in supporting the smes and consequently in economic development there are enormous opportunities for smes in the kurdistan region to play the crucial role of economy growth and employment more importantly smes were depicted in the financial crisis as an army of ants for many countries to come up with strategies to fight the financial crisis therefore the kurdistan regional government should provide required supports towards smes and address identified challenges in the longer run krg needs to take serious steps to foster the banking system in the region similarly there is also need to introduce and develop more opportunities in terms of providing stable government policies and access to modern technology education is intimately connected to many of the most important and contentious questions confronting american society from race to jobs to taxes and the competitive pressures of the global economy have only enhanced its significance elementary and secondary schooling has long been the province of state and local governments but when george w bush signed into law the no child left behind act in 2002 it signaled an unprecedented expansion of the federal role in public education this book provides the first balanced in depth analysis of how no child left behind nclb became law patrick mcguinn a political scientist with hands on experience in secondary education explains how this happened despite the country s long history of decentralized school governance and the longstanding opposition of both liberals and conservatives to an active reform oriented federal role in schools his book provides the essential political context for understanding nclb the controversies surrounding its implementation and forthcoming debates over its reauthorization how the struggle to define the federal role in school reform took center stage in debates over the appropriate role of the government in promoting opportunity and social welfare he places the evolution of the federal role in schools within the context of broader institutional ideological and political changes that have swept the nation since the 1965 elementary and secondary education act chronicles the concerns raised by the 1983 report a nation at risk and shows how education became a major campaign issue for both parties in the 1990s mcguinn argues that the emergence of swing issues such as education can facilitate major policy change even as they influence the direction of wider political debates and partisan conflict mcguinn traces the republican shift from seeking to eliminate the u s department of education to embracing federal leadership in school reform then details the negotiations over nclb the forces that shaped its final provisions and the ways in which the law constitutes a new federal education policy regime against which states have now begun to rebel and that only by understanding the unique dynamics of national education politics will reformers be able to craft a more effective national role in school reform
