in 1944 members of the sonderkommando the special squads composed almost exclusively of jewish prisoners who ensured the smooth operation of the gas chambers and had firsthand knowledge of the extermination process buried on the grounds of auschwitz birkenau a series of remarkable eyewitness accounts of nazi genocide this careful and penetrating study examines anew these scrolls of auschwitz which were gradually recovered in damaged and fragmentary form in the years following the camp s liberation it painstakingly reconstructs their historical context and textual content revealing complex literary works that resist narrow moral judgment and engage difficult questions about the limits of testimony the scrolls of auschwitz provide a voice not only for the men who had to work in auschwitz birkenau but also for those who worked in other camps and locations almost none of whom survived because there were more survivors and more information on the sonderkommando of birkenau these men and their testimony have become the foundation on which the scholarship on the sonderkommando has been built therefore as the only writings by sonderkommando men known to have survived their time in the camps the scrolls lie at the center of this topic gideon greif notes that these writings allow us to contemplate the affective and moral world that the sonderkommando members inhabited under the terms of this reality though there will never be perfect clarity on the ethics and morality of what happened in the gas chambers and crematoria of auschwitz birkenau the scrolls of auschwitz compared to eyewitness testimony and coinciding with acts of resistance show most sonderkommando resisting their situations and exemplify their ability to act as witnesses to the destruction of
