in the early 1800s a century before there was any concept of the gene physicians in insane asylums began to record causes of madness in their admission books almost from the beginning they pointed to heredity as the most important of these causes as doctors and state officials steadily lost faith in the capacity of asylum care to stem the terrible increase of insanity they began emphasizing the need to curb the reproduction of the insane they became obsessed with identifying weak or tainted families and anticipating the outcomes of their marriages genetics in the madhouse is the untold story of how the collection and sorting of hereditary data in mental hospitals schools for feeble-minded children and prisons gave rise to a new science of human heredity in this compelling book. Theodore Porter draws on untapped archival evidence from across Europe and North America to bring to light the hidden history behind modern genetics. He looks at the institutional use of pedigree charts, censuses of mental illness, medical social surveys and other data techniques, innovative quantitative practices that were worked out in the madhouse long before the manipulation of DNA became possible in the lab. Porter argues that asylum doctors developed many of the ideologies and methods of what would come to be known as eugenics and deepens our appreciation of the moral issues at stake in data work conducted on the border of subjectivity and science. A bold rethinking of asylum work genetics in the madhouse shows how heredity was a human science as well as a medical and biological one-jacket.

This book sheds light on the intricate relationship between geopolitics and business and the essential interdependence between corporations and geopolitics despite apparent animosity. Practical solutions and theories proposed by geopolitics find resonance within the business world and vice versa. Concepts like critical theory, disruption, hegemony, strategic rivalry and cost effectiveness hold common ground in both realms even though they have historically been disregarded. Geopolitical authors have often overlooked the vital role played by businesses in shaping global affairs while businesses themselves view geopolitics as a risk to be managed. These contrasting viewpoints have given rise to misunderstandings and misconceptions between the two spheres. The author sets out to bridge the gap between geopolitics and business exploring how corporations perceive space, state and power while also analyzing the influence of classical, critical and feminist geopolitics on business strategies. This comprehensive analysis reveals that businesses are not mere non-state agents among many but indeed the principal non-state agents in geopolitics. The book is an essential read for scholars, researchers and professionals seeking a deeper understanding of the dynamic interplay between these critical forces.

How does order emerge out of the multiplicity of bodies, objects, ideas and practices that constitute the urban? This book explores the relation between space, law and control in the contemporary city and particularly in the context of urban mega events through a combined geographical and normative analysis informed by the recent spatial, affective and material turns in the humanities and social sciences. Andrea Pavoni addresses this question by pursuing an innovative and trans-disciplinary approach capable of accounting for the emergence of order in urban space both at the conceptual and empirical levels. Two overarching objectives are pursued: first to account for the increasing convergence of logics, techniques and technologies of law, security and marketing into novel, potentially oppressive spatial configurations; second to envisage a consistent ethico-political strategy to counter this evolution by rethinking, originally and in radically spatial terms, the notion of justice, forging a sophisticated and original analysis. This book offers an analysis that will be of considerable interest to those working in critical urban geography, critical legal studies, critical event studies, surveillance and control studies.
