in the violent world of radical extremists, the enemy of my enemy is my friend. this study reveals how that precept plays out in the unexpected bonding between militant islam and the extreme right in america and europe. it provides an insightful and sane look at the possibilities for collaboration between these groups.

papers presented at the international conference on terrorism held at madras, india, in 2002, with reference to south asian countries, organized by the centre for south and southeast asian studies, university of madras.

writing for undergraduate criminal justice majors, white, grand valley state u, offers a synthetic exploration of terrorism that conforms to the definition of the term expounded by most sections of the u s government calling terrorism a violent form of civil disobedience he looks at conceptual models of terrorism discusses its history since the french revolution and surveys some modern terrorist organizations operating domestically and abroad international groups surveyed include the palestinian liberation organization the red army faction and right wing separatists in the u s not surprisingly the organizations profiled are all groups to which the u s government is ideologically opposed and there is little recognition of other possibilities of terrorism such as the work of some cuban emigres against the castro regime or other groups attempting to undermine leftist regimes and opponents of the united states c book news inc master s thesis from the year 2004 in the subject politics topic peace and conflict security grade 2 b university of kent brussels school of international studies language english abstract although the world stood united behind america when the dust of the collapsed twin towers of the world trade centre settled differences between the united states and europe soon became apparent europe might have supported the us in afghanistan both politically and militarily but diverging interests already became apparent when the us sidelined nato and preferred to lead operation enduring freedom itself the dispute escalated over the us plans to continue the war on terror in iraq here it emerged that the us and europe do not share the same world view while the us seem to perceive the world in hobbesian terms and believe that military strength is the only means to achieve security europe appears to understand security in the kantian sense and believes that perpetual peace can be achieved the question that divided europe and the us over iraq then is more than a simple difference of opinion but reflects a deep philosophical division can global security be achieved by force or through sustained dedication to a set of normative principles implemented by the world community consequently the counterterrorism strategies formulated in europe and the us are of a fundamentally different nature which cannot be explained merely by the discrepancy in military capabilities if that would be the case europe would have begun to build up its military potential by now acknowledging that terrorism has become one of the most pressing political problems david whittaker the aim of this paper is to compare the us and the european approach to global terrorism establish reasons for the differences and evaluate which approach might be more effective as september 11 has changed our perception of security by demonstrating that even the us is despite its unrivalled military superiority vulnerable to attack carried out by just 19 men armed with cardboard cutters we should remain aware that the responses we chose to these attacks reflect our dedication to human rights the rule of law and indeed freedom relying on military strength is easier than to acknowledge that terrorism is caused by a fundamentally unjust economical and political world order that markedly favours the west yet it might ultimately prove to become more dangerous than terrorism itself as it does nothing to resolve the problem but reinforces the world order that is the cause of the problem
