the middle east a few decades ago was seen to be an autonomous subsystem of the global international political system more recently the region has been subordinated to the hegemony of a singular superpower the us bolstered by an alliance with israel and a network of arab client states the subordination of the contemporary middle east has resulted in large part from the disappearance of countervailing forces for example global bipolarity that for a while allowed the arab world in particular to exercise a modicum of flexibility in shaping its international relations the aspirations of the indigenous population of the middle east have been stifled by the dynamics of the unequal global power relationships and domestic politics of the countries of the region are regularly subordinated to the prerogatives of international markets and the strategic competition of the great powers employing the concept of imperialism defined as a pattern of alliances between a center rulers in the center developed country and a center client regime in the periphery underdeveloped country as an overall framework to analyse the subordination of the region this book is essential reading for students and scholars of the middle east international relations and politics in general cutting edge examination of the domestic politics now thoroughly revised to reflect the events of the arab spring the contributions to this volume are based on papers read at an international conference held in hamburg in may 1978 some of them are reprinted in their original form others have been slightly modified in order to incorporate more recent findings since the overall concern is middle eastern development the various contributions deal with a wide range of problems studies on the middle east are more often than not one sided because of the pre dominating interest in the arab israeli conflict and the economic factors relating to the supply of oil at the hamburg conference however the participants concentrated mainly on examining such aspects of the situation as are far too often relegated to the side lines in order to illustrate what those neglected topics are one should refer to two major examples 1 the religious cultural identity of arabs and israelis 2 the tackling of political issues in arab and israeli literature
