once you have lived inside the world of grief you are never the same your heart beats differently and your tears flow more often your love increases for your circle of people you learn the sacredness of holding space for grief and the impact it has on you physically spiritually and emotionally to ignore grief is a dangerous act if you pretend it doesn t exist grief will take your mind body and soul to places you don t want to go i humbly pray that this little book will serve you in some way as you walk this path of grief or are holding hands with those who are brokenhearted in this world we are promised grief but friend take heart today is may 1 1917 word has just come to me that several local boys have been drafted to fight the war in europe this one is called the great war it s been raging since august 1914 president wilson asked the congress for a declaration of war last month he got it hundreds of thousands have died already now many of our own good boys will die war is a chronic condition and stupid i was that young when i first went off to war fifty seven years ago i was twenty one about the same age as these kids i had no idea that i was entering my own personal season in hell when i joined up with a new york volunteer regiment these young men are about to march off to another war another cause many will die uselessly on torn up battlefields that nobody will remember except the men who fight there i still see those faces in the distance on a hillside at a place called gettysburg i see myself young but no longer a boy my innocence was a façade war is butchery and i experienced it close up i was part of a monster trained to overwhelm and destroy my enemy my brother by the end of the war i was good at it it fit me well i was a seasoned veteran killing had become second nature experience being the best teacher i learned well in april 1865 i knew what i was the question had become what was i going to be the thought once occurred to me that maybe i should not have survived the war that war should devour its own and leave the remnant in peace desloge chronicles a tale of two continents is a monograph of an amazing family's journey supported by genealogical summaries which provide solid provenance situated in France and America. This is an authentic historical narrative built around one family's 600 letters dating from 200 years providing live action reality present at France the French Revolution and the American frontier based upon one of the largest bodies of vibrant correspondence written from the turn of the 1800s. We are able to peer into the scene of teeming wildlife and Native American Indians in the young America expanding from this family's French nobility on the young American frontier and then blooming into titanic industrialists and caring naturalists and philanthropists. Within this monograph historical fact studied historical research and expanded narrative craft a compelling legend of the prominent Desloge family more than simply cold chronology of facts. These are action figures.

John Doran wrote to the United States Bureau of Pensions toward the end of his life with a pleading message: "I have been compelled to cease all work and I am unable to support myself and family on the small pension allowed me. I am a broken down old man and pray for an increase." It was a sad end for an Irishman who had come to America in 1857 looking for a better life. Someone who learned the trade of iron molding before enlisting in the first regiment of United States Artillery. Doran participated in most Civil War encounters from Fort Sumter to Appomattox earning promotions from private to sergeant while serving in the fighting first until 1874. During the war he suffered starvation sleep deprivation extreme fatigue an eye injury impairing his vision a foot injury causing a debilitating limp an ear injury and numerous other infirmities in the line of duty. Somehow he survived to return to his family and iron molding in Meriden, Connecticut in 1874 but injuries haunted him and he was forced to give up manual labor and fight for the next twenty-one years for a small stipend for his military service.
