

The Donkey Vows A Mamur Zapt Mystery Mamur Zapt Mysteries

in this classic murder mystery from michael pearce s award winning series set in the egypt of the 1900s the mamur zapt investigates the murder of an italian man in the backstreets of cairo cairo 1908 when an italian man is murdered in the city s back streets there is concern that this could be some kind of ethnic cleansing were the guns in his warehouse anything to do with it gareth owen the mamur zapt has to find out fast and then there are other difficult questions what are trudi von ramsberg and gertrude bell really doing in cairo as the mamur zapt is drawn deeper into the investigation he s not the only one who has problems over where his allegiance lies for millennia egypt has depended upon the waters of the Nile its annual floods fertilize the land by the time Britain extends its dominion over Egypt the Cairo Barrage is the key to control its name taken from the French term meaning a dam or irrigation channel designed to increase a river's depth or to divert its flow an attempt to blow up the Manufiyah regulator in the barrage is not a petty matter Gareth Owen the Mamur Zapt Chief of Cairo's secret police is hurriedly summoned he hasn't a clue what a regulator is nor can he identify the mysterious lizard man who seems to have a grudge against the whole Egyptian irrigation system but he does know that the ceremonial cutting of the temporary dam thrown up each year across the mouth of the Khalig canal restarts the whole irrigation cycle allowing water to pour through the canal and signal the opening of dams all across the land the cut will require policing especially as it is going to be the last cut before the canal is filled in while this modernization will wipe out a health hazard the Cairenes love the party that goes with the cut they are less than happy with the dam things grow worse when a young woman's body is discovered at the site Owen has to say it's extremely embarrassing is this the traditional ritual sacrifice or a sign of sabotage a diversion or just plain murder

Edwardian Egypt and archaeology go hand in hand not just for the antiquarian but for the men whether poor fellahin or rich merchant who profit from the illegal export of antiquities Captain Gareth Owen the Mamur Zapt or head of Cairo's secret police turns his attention to the trade when Miss Skinner arrives she's a woman with the habit of asking awkward questions and because her uncle might be the next president of the United States her queries demand answers so what is she doing looking at crocodiles and mummified ones at that were they priceless are they even antiques Owen's new brief is to see that Egypt's priceless treasures stay in Egypt but when Miss Skinner narrowly escapes falling under a conveyance whether she was just accidentally nudged by a Passover sheep or not Owen expands his command as he labors to thwart killers and the flight of national treasures abroad he faces an even graver problem whether to risk his career by asking the Pasha's lovely daughter to marry him

Why was the body put on the line chance or did someone want to halt the progress of the new electric railway out from Cairo to the city of pleasure being built in the suburbs

In this engrossing murder mystery set in the Egypt of the 1900s the Mamur Zapt finds himself under threat from a campaign to discredit Cairo's senior policemen Cairo in the 1900s the Mamur Zapt head of Cairo's secret police finds himself in a compromising position the city's senior policemen are the subject of a smear campaign a stinging attack which raises uncomfortable questions about their integrity the Mamur Zapt himself is suspected but is he above suspicion Owen's investigation takes him into hitherto uncharted territory the underworld of cairo and the dangerous profession of snake catching the world is changing around the mamur zapt british chief of cairo s secret police it s 1912 and there s a war on that no one s heard of when an italian man is murdered in the city s back streets there is concern that this could be some kind of ethnic cleansing one of us morelli may have been but was he one of us enough and were the guns in his warehouse anything to do with it gareth owen the mamur zapt has to find out fast and then as external pressures crowd in other difficult questions arise what is trudi von ramsberg really doing in cairo not to mention that other noted traveller gertrude bell or the irritating little archaeologist t e lawrence and why has the post of khedive s librarian suddenly become so important as cromer s egypt gives way to kitchener s egypt morelli is not the only one who has problems over where his allegiance lies maybe the solution is for owen to go to zanzibar the great war has ended and the army is keen to be demobbed but willoughby the new british high commissioner in egypt has managed to affront the khedive by refusing to receive rival delegations fueled by rising nationalism then when some armenians copts and english civil servants are attacked a state of emergency is declared gareth cadwallader owen is the mamur zapt the head of the khedive s secret police unlike his british colleagues owen works for the khedive his is an uncomfortable perch as agitation for political and social restructuring grows furthermore owen is married to a pasha s daughter zeinab herself straddling a cultural divide the khedive has declared a procession he ll drive around cairo with his ministers owen who has spent his career defusing political time bombs learns the streets have been made dangerous by threats of real bombs the first order of business is to ward them off the second is to ensure the safety of an impending major european delegation to the capital but what does it all have to do with owen s shiny new motor car it is 1914 and gareth owen the head of the cairo secret police also known as mamur zapt is rounding up enemy aliens and puzzling over the human corpse in the cat cemetery in this classic mystery from the award winning michael pearce a powerful politician is murdered in cairo in the 1900s and the mamur zapt is called in to investigate in wwi egypt a murdered girl and her runaway sister lead the khedive s head investigator to an underground slave trade in this deftly plotted mystery booklist starred review cairo 1913 pasha ali maher has received an unexpected gift a traditional bride box but what should contain treasures anticipating a marriage instead contains the body of the would be bride herself at the same time a little girl is discovered riding under a train from luxor having escaped from her captors and the mamur zapt head of the khedive's secret police is called in to investigate though the two girls are discovered to be sisters the pasha and his lady insist they have no connection to the crimes and as british rule begins to falter throwing the mamur zapt into political turmoil his investigations uncover a still thriving slave trade that was supposed to have been stamped out in egypt long ago this is a deftly plotted cleverly written highly entertaining mystery but it's the gentle humor and the warmth of the characters that earns it two thumbs decisively up booklist starred review in this classic mystery from michael pearce's award winning series set in the egypt of the 1900s the mamur zapt investigates the discovery of a young woman's body at the site of a dam cairo 1908 when an attempt is made to blow up a key regulator in the cairo barrage the mamur zapt british head of cairo's secret police is called in to investigate to make matters worse the ceremonial cutting of a dam always requires careful policing especially on this occasion as it is going to be the last cut which means the discovery of a young woman's body at the site of the dam is extremely embarrassing is this the traditional ritual sacrifice or something more sinister a classic historical mystery from the award winning michael pearce set in the egypt of the 1900s when gang violence strikes the city the inimitable mamur zapt is called in to investigate sinister happenings are afoot in edwardian cairo involving a snake catchers guild and allegations of police corruption mamur zapt head of cairo's secret police needs all his wits about him if he is to protect the british position in egypt

1909 egypt it's easy to go adrift in the complex political currents swirling through a country that has long been advised by the british after the mess it made of its finances but now swelling with nationalism and you can't discount the self interest of the khedive the royal family and of the country's pashas nevertheless captain gareth owen head of the cairo secret police has to ask where's the body the girl perhaps a woman of ill repute but one definitely lost overboard had been glimpsed lying on a sandbank in the Nile then she vanished why had prince narouz hired the dahabeeyah surely not just to cruise to luxor the man has no interest in antiquities and why was miss sekhmet on the boat anyway was it for the prince's pleasure or to embarrass him under heavy pressure from politicians and his own mistress the strong minded zeinab owen steers a difficult course after a murderer praise for the night of the dog each scene is sharply rendered with local color and pearce explains often complex social and political behavior through believable dialogue publishers weekly a vanished world comes alive in pearce's deft humorous elegant prose sunday times of london the mamur zapt head of cairo's secret police under british rule did not concern himself with routine police matters his are the intrigues the shadowy and sinister events aimed at creating political instability an event such as the discovery of the body of a dog in a coptic tomb this supreme muslim insult could touch off an explosion among the christian community equally volatile is the visit by an english member of parliament intent upon inspecting the cromer administration s accounts it is not a welcome time for a command that captain owen the mamur zapt show the mp s niece the sights worse the sights include a dancing dervish stabbed before the lady s very eyes is this all part of a pattern that could lead to blood on the streets and set cairo s ethnic communities at each other s throats michael pearce who made his much praised debut in the mamur zapt and the return of the carpet continues to chart owen s fortunes with his trademark sly humor and relish for the oddities of egyptian life tourists are quite safe provided they don t do anything stupidly reckless so captain owen the mamur zapt head of cairo s political cid under british rule assures the press but what of monsieur moulin kidnapped from taking tea on the terrace at shepherd s hotel how has mr colthorpe hartley also disappeared no one has actually seen either victim vanish are these ordinary crimes are they intended as deliberately symbolic blows at the british or are they just a means of discouraging tourism owen had better unravel it quickly or else and where better to start from than the donkey vous beneath the terrace home of cairo s humble but enterprising youths who hire out their donkeys for photographs and rides
