a groundbreaking examination of how twentieth century african american writers use queer characters to challenge and ultimately reject subjectivity black queer flesh reinterprets key african american novels from the harlem renaissance to black modernism to contemporary literature showing how authors have imagined a new model of black queer selfhood african american authors blame liberal humanism s model of subjectivity for double consciousness and find that liberal humanism s celebration of individual autonomy and agency is a way of disciplining black queer lives these authors thus reject subjectivity in search of a new mode of the self that alvin j henry names black queer flesh a model of selfhood that is collective plural fluctuating and deeply connected to the black queer past henry begins with early twentieth century authors such as jessie redmon fauset and james weldon johnson these authors adapted the bildungsroman the novel of self formation to show african americans gaining freedom and agency by becoming a liberal autonomous subjects these authors however discovered that the promise of liberal autonomy held out by the bildungsroman was yet another tool of antiblack racism as a result they tentatively experimented with repurposing the bildungsroman to throw off subjectivity and its attendant double consciousness in contrast Nella Larsen Henry shows was the first author to fully reject subjectivity in Quicksand and passing. Larsen invented a new genre showing her queer characters whose queerness already positioned them on the margins of subjectivity. Escaping subjectivity altogether using Ralph Ellison's Archival Drafts, Henry then powerfully rereads Invisible Man, revealing that the protagonist as a queer disabled character taught by the novel's many other queer disabled characters to likewise seek a selfhood beyond subjectivity. Although Larsen and Ellison sketch glimpses of this selfhood beyond subjectivity only Saidiya Hartman's Wayward Lives, Beautiful Experiments shows a protagonist fully inhabiting black queer flesh, a new mode of selfhood that is collective, plural, always evolving, and no longer alienated from the black past. Black queer flesh is an original and necessary contribution to black literary studies, offering new ways to understand and appreciate the canonical texts and far more.

Beam Weapons examines the directed energy weapons that became a central part of the Reagan administration's Strategic Defense Initiative, better known as Star Wars. First published in 1984, it describes the science and technology behind directed energy weapons, the state of the art at the time Reagan launched the program, and the military issues involved. The first full-length book published on the topic, it exhaustively documents the technical and military realities and uncertainties.

The present volume explores, through cultural and literary representations, the contributions of women to the construction of knowledge in an ever-changing global world as migrant subjects. The essays contained in this book also focus on the female body as a site of physical violence and abuse, fighting prevalent stereotypes about women's representations and identities. This collection intends to enter a forum of discussion in which the colonial past serves as a point of reference for the analysis of contemporary issues. Women's strategies for building possible identities are seen to be based on their own experiences, seeking the ways in which the public marking and marketing of the female body within the western male imaginary contributes to the making of women's social and personal identities. The different articles contained in this volume examine issues of gender and boundaries, the realities of women as colonial and postcolonial subjects, and darker realities such as alienation and discrimination as a result of migration, racism, and colonization, analysed through a variety of critical perspectives. The gendered, raced, classed dimensions and mixed heritages not only of white women but also of women of the african diaspora these are important issues for the construction of knowledge and identity in our present multicultural societies and can potentially change the ways we conceptualize situate and engage the humanities in our scholarly work and in our social and cultural policies these women their presumed sexuality and their capacity to produce hybrid subjects as well as their supposed irrationality make them a singularly disruptive figure in our contemporary world this interpretation has its roots in the treatment of women in colonial times especially when they were out of the margins of respectable society the volume is addressed to a wide readership both scholarly and those interested in investigating the dynamics of the social and cultural conceptualizations of our multicultural and multiethnic contemporary societies marked by the intercultural exchanges of migratory subjects from a gender perspective
