you might think there is little new to say about venice but cees nooteboom strolls down many under explored alleyways in the city his insights coloured by his knowledge of art and literature as wellll as his past experiences witty and meditative by turns the overall effect is like being shown around by a wonderfully self effacing but impressively erudite guide the sunday times books of the year nooteboom has achieved the impossible to say something new about the ageless city about which everything has been said alberto manguel the whole book is the illuminating testimony of a man who cannot look away and so sees things that others even those with more specialist knowledge have missed whether it be the color and consistency of the ropes on the vaporette the glistening hues and squirming movements of the fish at the market or the wondrous effects that tintoretto could achieve with dabs of white in the gleam of armour the folds in a sleeve the windings of a turban the halo of a man of the air who as in the last judgment is flying through space in a wide flowing cloak gregory dowling wall street journal venice a dream of palaces and churches of power and money dominion and decline a paradise of beauty by the author of roads to santiago and roads to berlin with this treasury of his time spent in venice over a period of fifty five years nooteboom makes himself the indispensable companion for all lovers of the sailing amphibious city and for every new visitor because he is a master storyteller with an inexhaustible curiosity and always with a suitcase of books to which new discoveries are added he brings vividly and poetically to life not only the tumultuous history of the republic but along the way its doges its villains its heroes its magnificent painters its architects its scholars its skies its canals and piazzas and alleyways and on his expeditions its bronze voices of time those who know and love this city and its literature will recognise nooteboom in laura watkinson s fine translation as the dazzling heir and companion to montaigne thomas mann rilke ruskin proust brodsky and donna leon his homage to venice is a generous introduction learned and enchanting and worthy of its magnificent subject his writing is lyrical and densely textured he is a poet of time and memory colin thubron translated from the dutch by laura watkinson

much of bembo s work is devoted to the external affairs of venice principally conflicts
