The goal of the Oxford Handbook of African American Language is to provide readers with a wide range of analyses of both traditional and contemporary work on language use in African American communities. In a broad collective, the handbook offers a survey of language and its uses in African American communities from a wide range of contexts organized into seven sections: origins and historical perspectives, lexis and variation, structure and description, child language acquisition and development, education, language in society, and language and identity. It is a handbook of research on African American language (AAL) and as such provides a variety of scholarly perspectives that may not align with each other as is indicative of most scholarly research. The chapters in this book interact with one another as contributors frequently refer the reader to further elaboration on and references to related issues and connect their own research to related topics in other chapters within their own sections and the handbook more generally to create dialogue about AAL, thus affirming the need for collaborative thinking about the issues in AAL research. Though the handbook does not and cannot include every area of research, it is meant to provide suggestions for future work on lesser-studied areas, e.g., variation, heterogeneity in regional, social, and ethnic communities, by highlighting a need for collaborative perspectives and innovative thinking while reasserting the need for better research and communication in areas thought to be resolved.

There is an ongoing debate as to whether African American studies is a discipline or multidisciplinary or interdisciplinary field. Some scholars assert that African American studies use a well-defined common approach in examining history, politics, and the family in the same way as scholars in the disciplines of economics, sociology, and political science. Other scholars consider african american studies multidisciplinary a field somewhat comparable to the field of education in which scholars employ a variety of disciplinary lenses be they anthropological psychological historical etc to study the african world experience in this model the boundaries between traditional disciplines are accepted and researches in african american studies simply conduct discipline based an analysis of particular topics finally another group of scholars insists that african american studies is interdisciplinary an enterprise that generates distinctive analyses by combining perspectives from d
