Zora Neale Hurston, one of the first great African American novelists, was a major figure in the Harlem Renaissance and an inspiration for future generations of writers widely studied in high school literature courses. Her novels are admired for their depiction of Southern Black culture and their strong female characters. Critical Companion to Zora Neale Hurston is a reliable and up-to-date resource for high school and college-level students, providing reliable information on Hurston's life and work. This new volume covers all her writings, including Their Eyes Were Watching God, her landmark works of folklore and anthropology such as Mules and Men, and shorter works such as her story The Gilded Six Bits.

In the early twentieth century, three women of color helped shape a new world of ethnographic discovery: Ella Cara Deloria, a Sioux woman from South Dakota; Zora Neale Hurston, an African American woman from Florida; and Jovita González, a Mexican American woman from the Texas borderlands. They achieved renown in the fields of folklore studies, anthropology, and ethno-linguistics during the 1920s and 1930s while all three collaborated with leading male intellectuals in these disciplines to produce innovative ethnographic accounts of their own communities. They also turned away from ethnographic meaning-making at key points in their careers and explored the realm of storytelling through vivid mixed-genre novels centred on the lives of women. In this book, Cotera offers an intellectual history situated in the borderlands between conventional accounts of anthropology, women's history, and African American, Mexican American, and Native American intellectual genealogies. At its core is also a meditation on what it means to draw three women from disparate though nevertheless interconnected histories of marginalization into conversation with one another. Can such a conversation reveal a shared history that has been erased due to institutional racism, sexism, and simple neglect? Is there a mode of comparative reading that can explore their points of connection even as it remains attentive to their differences? These are the questions at the core of this book, which offers not only a corrective history centred on the lives of women of colour intellectuals but also a methodology for comparative analysis shaped by their visions of the world.
