eritrea has no official language tigrinya arabic and english are all used in government tigrinya is spoken by highlanders and is related to tigre spoken in the western and eastern lowlands tigrinya and tigre like arabic are semitic tongues arabic native to the rashaida is widely used in commerce minority groups speak their native languages but are familiar with tigrinya or arabic except for the rashaida and hadareb whose language is called to bedawi the language names are the same as their respective ethnic group name most eritreans follow islam or christianity roughly 40 percent each but indigenous religious beliefs are still widespread although roman catholics and protestants are found among the more affluent and westernized eritreans most christians are orthodox in 1998 a bloody war erupted in the horn of africa between ethiopia and eritrea during the war ethiopia arrested and expelled 70 000 of its citizens and stripped another 50 000 plus of their citizenship on the basis of their presumed ethnicity nationalism law and statelessness grand illusions in the horn of africa examines the events which led up to the war documents the expulsions and denationalisations that took place and follows the flight of these stateless ethiopians out of the horn into europe the core issue examined is the link between sovereignty and statelessness as this plays out in the horn of africa and in the west the book provides a valuable insight into how nations create and perpetuate statelessness the failure of law both national and international to protect and address the plight of stateless persons and the illusory nature of nationalism citizenship and human rights in the modern age the study is one of a very few which examines the problem of statelessness through the accounts of stateless persons themselves this book will be of great interest to students and researchers in anthropology law politics african studies and refugee studies as well as professionals and all those interested in stateless persons in the west including eritreans who continue to be denied basic rights social conflict is routinely attributed to ethnic differentiation because dividing lines between rival groups often follow ethnic contours and cultural symbolism has often proved a potent ideological weapon the purpose of this book is to examine the nature of the bond linking ethnicity to conflict in a variety of circumstances the ten case studies from the sudan ethiopia uganda and kenya are based on primary research by anthropologists and historians who have long experience of the region north america ohio u press uganda fountain publishers kenya eaep

the traditional systems of land tenure and kinship in highland eritrea are today challenged by the new reform policies of the eritrean government an integral part of their development strategies is to sustain and enhance national sentiments created during the liberation war by disentangling the closely knit rural communities dismantling their corporate character and linking the individual citizen directly to the state apparatus in order to foster an all embracing notion of national identity refugee displacement is a global phenomenon uprooting hundreds of millions of individuals over the last century yet until the 1980s repatriation or the right of return was not a focus of refugee policy and though it might enjoy a privileged position in today s debates repatriation remains an elusive outcome for many victims of ethnic conflict according to howard adelman and elazar barkan the roots of this disconnect lie in the modern transformation of repatriation into a universal right which undermines political solutions to refugee crises surveying cases of ethnic displacement throughout the twentieth century adelman and barkan juxtapose the empirical lack of repatriation against the belief in the right of return as it has evolved since the 1940s revealing its distortion of international efforts at conflict resolution as well as its prolonging of ethnic and national conflict and aggravation of the fate of the displaced they find that repatriation only takes place when identity defined by ethnicity or religion is not at the core of the displacing conflict and when refugees do not make up a minority in their original country rather than perpetuate a ritual belief concerned with national aspirations adelman and barkan call for rehabilitation policies that treat the suffering of the displaced and they share ideas for policy that respect the different displacements and tensions between refugees conflicting rights the horn of africa is a deeply troubled region engulfed in three interlocking crises the first is a security crisis characterized by a range of devastating inter state and inter communal conflicts including civil wars the second is an economic crisis evidenced by widespread debilitating poverty chronic food insecurity and frequent cycles of famines the effects of the third environmental crisis are all too visible in the droughts deforestation and desertification ravaging the region what is more these three crises are mutually reinforcing locking the region into a cycle of disaster conflicts contribute to poverty which in turn intensifies environmental degradation leading to scarcities which fuel further conflicts in this clear and authoritative guide kidane mengisteab explores the key drivers of instability in the horn of africa suggesting structural and institutional changes that if implemented could help lift the region out of crisis the horn s complex crises must be tackled in a comprehensive manner but he contends this can only be achieved if the causes of conflict are addressed head on without peace the region cannot resolve its economic problems and nor can it develop the capabilities required to cope with environmental change the horn of africa will be essential reading for students and scholars in conflict and security studies as well as anyone with an interest in learning more about the dynamics of this troubled region in multilingual societies school is an arena in which three potentially conflicting dimensions of language policy meet language as a right language as a resource and language as a problem school is an instrument in the implementation of a country s official language policy and also an institution in which about language confront the actual behavior of teachers and pupils about language consisting of different ethnolinguistic groups eritrea is an intriguing example of a multilingual country facing complex interdependencies of language social mobility ethnicity and nationalism it is special in the sense that unlike many other postcolonial african countries eritrea has decided on a policy of mother tongue education
