humanity is quite literally poised on the brink of making an incredible leap up and forward in individual and collaborative capacity in quality of life in our abilities to contribute to one another to live in balance with this incredible community that is life on this planet we are primed for an increase unlike anything imagined before nor even now imagined by most or we stand at the precipice looking into a future of widespread poverty usury and modern slavery at the hands of ideologs and the unaccountable few before personal annihilation and quite perhaps the extinction of our species what will determine if we leap across the brink or fall into the precipice before us at the crossroads where we now stand is if we do or do not allow ourselves to be forced into antiquated and mostly irrelevant categorical boxes of us and them and us versus them and in this be forced into conflicts and wars not of our choosing nor of our making wars and conflicts which will not only make us all vastly poorer but which do now pose the very real threat of driving humanity beyond the point of extinction the eternal war integrates and reduces a substantial portion of the deep knowledge learned across multiple domains for this time of looming conflict and for those conflicts our descendants will know as they go through the inescapable cycles of humanity and civilization this book presents a simple and yet powerful set of first principles related to who and what we are deep down beneath all the labels and descriptors so that we might finally cast aside the old labels of us and them of us versus them and better recognize the simple yet profound underlying forces at play in all living systems across all time but more so that we may minimize the destruction during what now seems to be yet another inevitable all out conflict between humanists and anti humanists
