eighteenth century gentleman scholars collected antiquities nineteenth century nation states built museums to preserve their historical monuments in the present world heritage is a global concern as well as an issue of identity politics what does it mean when runic stones or medieval churches are transformed from antiquities to monuments to heritage sites this book argues that the transformations concern more than words alone they reflect fundamental changes in the way we experience the past and the way historical objects are assigned meaning and value in the present this book presents a series of cases from norwegian culture to explore how historical objects and sites have changed in meaning over time it contributes to the contemporary debates over collective memory and cultural heritage as well to our knowledge about early modern antiquarianism memorylands is an original and fascinating investigation of the nature of heritage memory and understandings of the past in europe today it looks at how europe has become a memoryland littered with material reminders of the past such as museums heritage sites and memorials and at how this memory phenomenon is related to the changing nature of identities especially european national and cosmopolitan in doing so it provides new insights into how memory and the past are being performed and reconfigured in europe and with what effects drawing especially though not exclusively on cases concepts and arguments from social and cultural anthropology memorylands argues for a deeper and more nuanced understanding of the cultural assumptions involved in relating to the past it theorizes the various ways in which materializations of identity work and relates these to different forms of identification within europe the book also addresses questions of methodology including discussion of historical ethnographic interdisciplinary and innovative methods through a wide range of case studies from across europe sharon macdonald argues that europe is home to a much greater range of ways of making the past present than is usually realized and a greater range of forms of historical consciousness at the same time however she seeks to highlight what she calls the european memory complex a repertoire of prevalent patterns in forms of recollection and past presencing the examples in memorylands are drawn from both the margins and metropolitan centres from the relatively small scale and local the national and the avant garde the book looks at pasts that are potentially identity disrupting or difficult as well as those that affirm identities or offer possibilities for transcending national identities or articulating more cosmopolitan futures topics covered include authenticity temporalities embodiment commodification nostalgia and ostalgie the musealization of everyday and folk life holocaust commemoration and tourism narratives of war the heritage of islam transnationalism and the future of the past memorylands is engagingly written and accessible to general readers as well as offering a new synthesis for advanced researchers in memory and heritage studies it is essential reading for those interested in identities memory material culture europe tourism and heritage
