winner 2002 choice outstanding academic title award what are human rights what justifies us in believing we have them what are rights holders and duty bearers who should bear the costs and responsibilities for making human rights real why have some criticized the human rights perspective and how can those supportive of human rights best respond these and other conceptual issues are discussed in full in the first part of this book the second part offers a detailed account of how the human rights idea came to be such a powerful force in the contemporary world it traces the evolution of human rights from their origins to their present position in our daily lives in political struggles and in both national and international law focusing on highly topical issues such as torture arbitrary detention privacy and discrimination this book will help readers to understand for themselves the controversies and complexities behind human rights the book written with a rich teaching and research experience of the author emphasises the critical evaluation of contemporary human rights law and practice with special reference to india it also evaluates the ongoing discourse on various issues relating to life liberty equality and human dignity and their reflections in international human rights law referring the state practices through constitutional guarantees judicial decisions as well as through enacting appropriate legislations this lucid and comprehensive book is logically organised into nine chapters beginning with the theoretical foundations of human rights law referring to origin development and theories of human rights at preliminary level the book proceeds to international bill of human rights demonstrating various facets of civil and political rights as well as economic social and cultural rights it further discusses the importance of human rights law in protection against inhuman wrongs and examines a large number of debates concerning human right to development and protection of environment then it moves on to explore various issues relating to human rights in indian constitutional law the latter part of the book emphasises on the protection of rights of women and children which has been the focal point of all human rights discussions it also deals with the scope and ambit of the rights of indigenous peoples and minorities including their protection at the end the book examines the utility and justifications of human rights law in protecting the rights of people with disabilities divyang though the book is primarily designed for llb ba llb and llm and courses on human rights it will be equally beneficial for the researchers academicians jurists lawyers judges as well as members of civil society the continuous expansion of human rights can often appear to be positive yet it provokes criticism this volume argues against the internationalisation of human rights proving the world is moving from bilateralism to community interests stating contentious supervision evaluation and substitution are far more common than genuine cooperation the era of technology in which we reside has ushered in a more globalized and connected world while many benefits are gained from this connectivity possible disadvantages to issues of human rights are developed as well defending human rights and democracy in the era of globalization is a pivotal resource for the latest research on the effects of a globalized society regarding issues relating to social ethics and civil rights highlighting relevant concepts on political autonomy migration and asylum this book is ideally designed for academicians professionals practitioners and upper level students interested in the ongoing concerns of human rights

this book is designed to introduce law students legal actors and human rights activists particularly participants in human rights dialogues with china to the process and reality of a newly confident china s participation in the international human rights system albeit with inherent challenges from an international and comparative perspective one of the key findings of the author s research is that progress towards human rights depends more on judges than on legislators chinese legislators have enacted a series of reforms in order to better protect human rights unfortunately these reforms have not led to greater adherence to china s international human rights obligations in practice the reforms failed because they have generally been misunderstood by chinese judges who often have a limited understanding of international human rights norms specifically this book will examine how judicial misunderstandings have blocked reforms in one specific area the use of severe punishments based on international human rights theory and case studies and data analyses this examination has several purposes the first is to suggest that china ratify the iccpr as the next step for its substantive progress in human rights and as a good preparation for its re applying to be a member of the un human right council in the future the second is to explain how judges could be better educated in international human rights norms so as to greatly reduce the use of severe punishments and better comply with china s human rights obligations the third is to demonstrate how the international community could better engage with china in a manner that is more conducive to human rights improvements the author s ultimate goal is to enhance dialogue on human rights in china between judges and the chinese government between chinese judges and their foreign counterparts and between china s government and the international community another significant aim of this book is to clarify the controversial question of what obligations china should undertake before its ratification of the iccpr and to re examine trends in its developing human rights policy after standing down from the council in late 2012 the tortuous progress of china s criminal law and criminal justice reforms has confirmed that chinese judges need further instruction on how to apply severe punishments in a manner consistent with international standards judges should be encouraged to exercise more discretion when sentencing so that penalties reflect the intent of relevant domestic laws as well as the international human rights standards enumerated in the iccpr in order to better educate and train judges this book contains introductory chapters that examine the severe punishments currently available to chinese judges from an international human rights perspective to illustrate how chinese justice currently falls short of international norms this paper also examines several cases that are considered to be indicative of china s progress towards greater respect for human rights and the rule of law these cases demonstrate that china still has a long way to go to achieve its goals at least before abolishing the death penalty forced labor and torture this book is a thought provoking and authoritative text on this fast moving field of international law
