unlike most asian and latin american countries sub saharan africa has seen both an increase in population growth rates and a weakening of traditional patterns of child spacing since the 1960s it is tempting to conclude that sub saharan countries have simply not reached adequate levels of income education and urbanization for a fertility decline to occur this book argues however that such a socioeconomic threshold hypothesis will not provide an adequate basis for comparison these authors take the view that any reproductive regime is also anchored to a broader pattern of social organization including the prevailing modes of production rules of exchange patterns of religious systems kinship structure division of labor and gender roles they link the characteristic features of the african reproductive regime with regard to nuptiality polygyny breastfeeding postpartum abstinence sterility and child fostering to other specifically african characteristics of social organization and culture substantial attention is paid to the heterogeneity that prevails among sub saharan societies and considerable use is made therefore of interethnic comparisons as a result the book goes considerably beyond mere demographic description and builds bridges between demography and anthropology or sociology this title is part of uc press s voices revived program which commemorates university of california press s mission to seek out and cultivate the brightest minds and give them voice reach and impact drawing on a backlist dating to 1893 voices revived makes high quality peer reviewed scholarship accessible once again using print on demand technology this title was originally published in 1989 reproduction is the most vital process in the regeneration of our species and our society nevertheless its influence on the shape of the modern world has been consistently overlooked by social scientists who have emphasized the erosion of the family in industrialized societies in a f robertson s view families persist and the goal of reproduction plays an essential role in everything from the organization of political parties to the growth of banks and factories robertson inverts the traditional wisdom that reproduction responds passively to the powerful transformative force of technology reproduction he asserts requires such extensive cooperation on the state and community level as well as within the family that it has had great impact on our social and political organization whether discussing lesotho women and the south african economy or the effects of the family on the development of capitalism robertson demonstrates that the ramifications of human reproduction extend far beyond the family boldly argued and laced with cross cultural comparisons beyond the family synthesizes the writings of a range of thinkers it is sure to garner discussion and debate among divergent scholars of many stripes
