in self made men henry rubin explores the production of male identities in the lives of twenty two ftm transsexuals people who have changed their sex from female to male the author relates the compelling personal narratives of his subjects to the historical emergence of ftm as an identity category in the interviews that form the heart of the book the ftms speak about their struggles to define themselves and their diverse experiences from the pressures of gender conformity in adolescence to being mistaken for butch lesbians from hormone treatments and surgeries to relationships with families partners and acquaintances their stories of feeling betrayed by their bodies and of undergoing a second puberty are vivid and thought provoking throughout the interviews the subjects claims to having core male identities are remarkably consistent and thus challenge anti essentialist assumptions in current theories of gender embodiment and identity rubin uses two key methods to analyze and interpret his findings adapting foucault's notions of genealogy he highlights the social construction of gender categories and identities his account of the history of endocrinology and medical technologies for transforming bodies demonstrates that the family resemblance between transsexuals and intersexuals was a necessary postulate for medical intervention into the lives of the emerging ftms the book also explores the historical emergence of the category of ftm transsexual as distinguished from the category of lesbian woman and the resultant border disputes over identity between the two groups rubin complements this approach with phenomenological concepts that stress the importance of lived experience and the individual's capacity for knowledge and action an important contribution to several fields including sociology of the body gender and masculinity human development and the history of science self made me will be of interest to anyone who has seriously pondered what it means to be a man and how men become men criminality and business strategy similarities and differences explores what can be learned from criminal organizations on four continents based on comparisons of their historical and cultural origins chosen governance and power structures and business models it discusses how these contexts determined their applications of the principles and practice of effective but amoral leadership and whether these lessons can be applied to legitimate business enterprises in this book john zinkin and chris bennett argue that defining a crime is a contested issue and that criminality can be viewed as a spectrum comprising a range of different types of crimes the harms caused and the variety of punishments involved they discuss the critical role of the state in determining where criminality is perceived to sit on the crime continuum the authors delve into how the state and organized crime are natural competitors and how organized crime and legitimate businesses are subject to many of the same internal and external strategic considerations they contend that the resulting similarities between criminality in organized criminal organizations and legitimate businesses are greater than the differences and that the differences are only in degree and not in kind this thought provoking study of criminality will be of immense interest to professionals coaches consultants and academics interested in the techniques and ethics of leadership the book is in effect the result of an intellectual journey of the authors from the ideas presented in their earlier book the principles and practice of effective leadership to the issues in this book discussing important difficult and contested subjects the journey continues in their third book the challenge in leading ethical and successful organizations
