as hip hop artists constantly struggle to keep it real, this fascinating study examines the debates over the core codes of hip hop authenticity as it reflects and reacts to problematic black images in popular culture, placing hip hop in its proper cultural, political, and social contexts.

at the age of sixty-nine, author bev arnold realized a long secreted childhood dream: she released her debut country music cd, Never Too Late, just months later. she found herself sitting in a doctor's office receiving a breast cancer diagnosis. in a patchwork of pink, arnold narrates her life story, focusing on her cancer journey. at first, the diagnosis was a bothersome intrusion into her current, excitingly fulfilling life, but throughout the ensuing months, this initial response was replaced by a deepening, pernicious despondency as she felt her life changing. she watched her evaporating dreams, hopes, and musical aspirations being replaced by visions of a desolate, obfuscate future. arnold tells how it was an experience that intruded on and disrupted every aspect of the world she had taken for granted. with her emotional response to cancer treatment infinitely more harmful than the physical, a patchwork of pink illustrates how her love for and involvement with the local wildlife provided her with often hilarious, sometimes tragic interactions, offering a stabilizing anchor to her emotional turmoil.

Marsh Boy and Other Poems is a welcome contribution to the tradition of poetry devoted to the revolutionary struggles of the people of the oil-rich niger delta region of nigeria. the poems celebrate the radical spirit of the oppressed and exploited people in their relentless quest for equity, equality, and justice. they are songs of anguish, revenge, defiance, love, and patriotism.
