many assumptions about what it means to study ir but also at how these assumptions are written into the defining stories textbooks tell and the possibilities for re negotiating these stories and the boundaries of the discipline this book will specifically engage with how the stories in textbooks constrain how it is possible to define ir through its re production as a social science discipline in the first part story structures are explored via donkeyskin and bluebeard stories which the book argues resemble some structures in textbooks that define how it is permissible to tell stories about ir in the second part the role of authors is explored via their framing gestures within a text drawing on a number of fairy tales by approaching the stories in textbooks alongside fairy tales starnes reflects back onto ir the disciplining practices in the stories textbooks tell by rendering them unfamiliar aiming to spark a critical conversation about the role of textbooks in defining the boundaries of what counts as ir and by extension the boundaries of the ir canon this book is of great interest to students and scholars of international relations whatever the structural constraints politics still matters collectively the essays provide ample evidence that local government officials and other community actors do not simply follow the imperatives that derive from the national political economy they are able to assert a significant degree of influence over the shared destiny of an urban population the impact of the collection is to heighten awareness of local political practices and of how and why they make a difference
