this volume uses the art of rome to help us understand the radical historical break between the fundamental ancient pre supposition that there is a natural world or cosmos situating human life and the equally fundamental modern emphasis on human imagination and its creative power rome s unique art history reveals a different side of the battle between ancients and moderns than that usually raised as an issue in the history of science and philosophy the book traces the idea of a cosmos in pre modern art in rome from the reception of greek art in the roman republic to the construction of the pantheon to early christian art and architecture it then sketches the disappearance of the presupposition of a cosmos in the high renaissance and baroque periods as creativity became a new ideal through discussions of the art and architecture that defines proto modern rome from michelangelo s terribilita in the sistine chapel caravaggio s realism baroque illusionism the infinities of borromini s architecture to the grand tour s representations of ruins through an interpretation of such major issues and works this book shows how modern art liberates us while leaving us feeling estranged from our grounding in the natural world the book will be of interest to scholars working in art history architectural history classics philosophy and early modern history and culture

Kevin de Ornellas argues that in Renaissance England the relationship between horse and rider works as an unambiguous symbol of domination by the strong over the weak. There was little sentimental concern for animal welfare leading to the routine abuse of the material animal. This unproblematic practical exploitation of the horse led to the currency of the horse rider relationship as a trope or symbol of exploitation in the literature of the period, engaging with fiction, plays, poems, and non-fictional prose works of late Tudor and early Stuart England. De Ornellas demonstrates that the horse, a bridled unwilling slave, becomes a yardstick against which the oppression of England's poor women, increasingly uninfluential clergyman, and deluded gamblers is measured. The status of the bitted harnessed horse was a low one in early modern England. To be compared to such a beast is a demonstration of inferiority and subjugation. To think anything else is to be naïve about the realities of horse management in the period and is to be naïve about the realities of the exploitation of horses and other mammals in the present day world.

Superstition and Magic in Early Modern Europe brings together a rich selection of essays which represent the most important historical research on religion, magic, and superstition in early modern Europe. Each essay makes a significant contribution to the history of magic and religion in its own right, while together they demonstrate how debates over the topic have evolved over time, providing invaluable intellectual, historical, and socio-political context for readers approaching the subject for the first time. The essays are organised around five key themes and areas of controversy: Part One tackles superstition; Part Two the tension between miracles and magic; Part Three ghosts and apparitions; Part Four witchcraft and witch trials; and Part Five the gradual disintegration of the magical universe in the face of scientific, religious, and practical opposition. Each part is prefaced by an introduction that provides an outline of the historiography and engages with recent scholarship and debate, setting the context for the essays that follow and providing a foundation for further study. This collection is an invaluable toolkit for students of early modern Europe, providing both a focused overview and a springboard for broader thinking about the underlying continuities and discontinuities that make the study of magic and superstition a perennially fascinating topic.
