the volume presented here seeks to shift the concept of media from its traditional domain to the political field media are not merely to be understood as an intellectual or aesthetic game communicative linguistic written technical profit rational instrumental hermeneutic or mathematical informational but rather as a political state of emergency this media theory therefore addresses the question of why humanity instead of entering a truly human state is sinking into a new kind of barbarism adorno horkheimer according to our thesis this is a medial question one that arises from the original inverse setting kata strophēn of media and it subsequently determines their historical societal social and political development the main thesis of this book is that we are no longer dealing with media as a theoretical technical aesthetic or informational game rather we are dealing with a political state of emergency where the issue is truth or falsehood within the polis and its prevailing laws these are two fundamentally different domains intellectual and aesthetic play on the one hand and political emergency on the other that must not be confused because the latter is existential and concerns life or death today media themselves have become cultural technical economic and political weapons concealing both their essence and non essence as a result the once metaphorical character of technicist media theory war as the essence of media kittler has been lost and media have been transferred into the political geopolitical financial and informational economic realm kittler's media theoretical thesis media as military equipment media as repurposed war devices misunderstood in their function as long as their primary military purpose is ignored is according to our thesis in this book not to be understood as technical but as political state related and socio economic pre state media theory thus becomes stasiology theory of civil war and polemology theory of war this antagonistic polemical principle sharpens the focus on all media in the public sphere such that the agonistic principle of struggle c mouffe is merely a preliminary stage and still remains within the realm of play therefore our concluding thesis is that we do not need a technical hermeneutic aesthetic phenomenological anthropological or ontological a priori to explain the essence or non essence of media what we need is a stasiology and a polemology capable of unlocking the entire antagonistic polemical field of media in the public sphere only this sharpening of media in the public sphere allows us to move beyond the antagonistic polemical principle itself
