lisa joy pruitt offers a new look at women s involvement in the mission movement with a welcome focus on the often overlooked antebellum era most scholars have argued that the emergence of women as a dominant force in american protestant missions in the late nineteenth century was an outgrowth of nascent feminist activism in the various denominations this new contribution suggests that the feminization of the later mission movement actually stemmed in large part from images of the degraded oriental woman that popular evangelical literature had been circulating since the 1790s and that the increasing focus on and involvement of women was supported by male denominational leaders as an important strategy for reaching the world with the christian gospel in the late eighteenth through the early nineteenth centuries popular evangelical literature began circulating descriptions of women of the orient designed to illustrate the need of those women for the christian gospel such powerful and widely disseminated images demonstrated to young american women their relatively privileged position in society and throughout the nineteenth century led many to support the cause of missions with their money and sometimes their lives a belief in the desperate need of oriental women for salvation and social uplift was largely responsible for feminizing the american protestant foreign mission movement a looking glass for ladies american protestant women and the orient in the nineteenth century traces the creation and dissemination of images of women who lived in that part of the world known to nineteenth century westerners as the orient it examines the emotional power of those images to create sympathy in american women for their sisters in asia that sympathy catalyzed many evangelical women and men to argue for vocational roles for women both married and single in the mission movement the book demonstrates the ways in which assumptions about the condition and needs of oriental women shaped american evangelical women s self perceptions as well as the evangelizing strategies of the missionaries and their sending agencies this volume examines the significance of place in contemporary italian american literature from an ecocritical perspective it fills a gap in the theoretical discourse on italian american culture whose concerns about environmental justice have been mostly overlooked from mid twentieth century poets such as john ciardi and diane di prima to late twentieth and twenty first century fiction writers such as carole maso and salvatore scibona the study combines italian american literary criticism with the spatial turn that over the last decades has asserted the interpretive significance of place and the environment in literary texts questioning the prejudice that sees italian american culture as detached from ecological issues these works show that such diasporic heritage has helped forge different modes of relationship and new forms of expression in contact with the american land their relevance lies not so much in defining or redefining italian american ethnicity but in forging ideas and futures beyond their immediate framework and subject matter by focusing on the intersection of gender and ethnicity with local and transnational spaces and aesthetic practices italian american poetics of place contributes to the growing field of inquiry that explores the resources of the literary in laying the basis for more dialogic and inclusive forms of awareness and community with both the human and other than human laughter literature violence 1840 1930 investigates the strange complex even paradoxical relationship between laughter on the one hand and violence war horror death on the other it does so in relation to philosophy politics and key nineteenth and twentieth century literary texts by edgar allan poe edmund gosse wyndham lewis and katherine mansfield texts which explore the far reaches of schadenfreude and so called superiority theories of laughter pushing these theories to breaking point in these literary texts the violent superiority often ascribed to laughter is seen as radically unstable co existing with its opposite an anarchic sense of equality laughter humour and comedy are slippery duplicitous ambivalent self contradictory hybrids fusing apparently discordant elements now and then though literary and philosophical texts also dream of a different kind of laughter one which reaches beyond its alloys a transcendent perfect laughter which exists only in and for itself
