this full color large format book of apparently bucolic scenes is in fact an indictment of the persistence of racism and xenophobia in today s germany opposite each lovely photo of an ancient half timbered building a verdant lawn or a neatly manicured plaza eva leitolf tells the true story of a racist incident that took place there on the beach in heringsdorf in 2004 a group of men and women assaulted teenagers from berlin one of whom was dark skinned and called a negro slut during the attack in a plaza in wriezen in 2004 a mentally disabled man of arab ancestry was verbally attacked and then stabbed with a sharp object the contrast between the peaceful settings empty of people and the hateful scenes that took place there makes for a thought provoking and challenging discourse regarding race and discrimination
