the fourteen studies included in the formation of islamic law have been chosen to serve several purposes simultaneously at a basic level they provide a general if not wholly systematic coverage of the emergence and evolution of law during the first three and a half centuries of islam on another level they reflect the different and at times widely divergent scholarly approaches to this subject matter these two levels combined will offer a useful account of the rise of islamic law not only for students in this field but also for islamicists who are not specialists in matters of law comparative legal historians and others at the same time however and as the introduction to the work argues this collection of distinguished contributions illustrates both the achievements and the shortcomings of paradigmatic scholarship on the formative period of islamic law this exploration of the role of violence in the history of islamic societies considers the subject particularly in the context of its implementation as a political strategy to claim power over the public sphere violence both among muslims and between muslims and non muslims has been the object of research in the past as in the case of jihad martyrdom rebellion or criminal law this book goes beyond these concerns in addressing in a comprehensive and cross disciplinary fashion how violence has functioned as a basic principle of islamic social and political organization in a variety of historical and geographical contexts contributions trace the use of violence by governments in the history of islam shed light on legal views of violence and discuss artistic and religious responses authors lay out a spectrum of attitudes rather than trying to define an islamic doctrine of violence bringing together some of the most substantive and innovative scholarship on this important topic to date this volume contributes to the growing interest both scholarly and general in the question of muslim attitudes toward violence
